PFA delegates re-elect Eckel president

HERSHEY — As the final hours of the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association 32nd Annual Meeting found the 170 delegates wrapping up this year's resolutions and voting them in as PFA policy, one significant part of the order of business was the election of a president. It came as no surprise to those assembled, however, when incumbent Keith Eckel was unanimoulsy voted in as the farm organization's chief for the next two years.

In his acceptance remarks, Eckel, who is a dairy and vegetable farmer from Lackawanna County, expressed his appreciation for the "vote of confidence" his fellow PFA members gave him. Eckel had completed the unexpired term of former PFA president Eugene Thompson.

Earlier in the week, Eckel voiced his concern about the current economic conditions in rural Pennsylvania during his presidential address.

"There is a terrible temptation to suggest quick fixes to our present economic problems, but we can't give into this urge of expediency at the expense of a lasting solution," he stressed.

Eckel observed that farming is in its third straight year of depressed income, adding that the debt burden of many farmers has worsened during that time. Emphasizing the fact that the solution to the economic problems will be slow in coming, Eckel stated PFA's position on how recovery could be made possible:

"We support the reduction of uncontrolled federal spending so that high interest rates might moderate and the spend-and-tax cycle might be broken. Meaningful cutbacks, including substantial reductions in entitlement programs, is the route to curtailment of excessive and non-essential government expenditures."

"PFA welcomes the progress that has been made to reduce inflation. We have long understood that inflation utlimately leads to serve distortions in production, prices, costs and farm income."

"We strongly support the economic policy direction toward reduced taxation and spending, regulatory reform and sound monetary policy set forth by the Reagan Administration. However, farmers are frustrated by the failure of this administration and the Congress to gain control of federal spending, and failure to balance the federal budget.

"Until the administration and Congress come to grips with entitlement program spending, PFA will no longer support reductions in federal expenditures for agriculture. We will not support federal farm programs administered on budget constraint grounds to accomodate the budget balancing objectives of the Reagan Administration," Eckel stated.

"We will fight any cuts in federal spending in agriculture until such time as the Reagan Administration

Farewell, beginnings mark IMPCO's 65th year

LANCASTER — It seemed a proper coincidence, on this past Veterans Day, that Inter-State Milk Producers' Cooperative applauded those individuals, who collectively gave more than 90 years of service to the 65-year-old co-op.

The veterans, James Honan, Paul Hand and Mary Quigley, stood before a crowd of several hundred members, guests and well-wishers, Thursday night, to reflect on past years and future challenges.

In his 25th year of service, Paul Hand, the former assistant general manager and economist accepted the reins of leadership as the co-op's general manager, replacing 35-year veteran James Honan.

"Today, I am between the past and the future — representing that link which will determine Inter-State's degree of success," Hand said.

He said his first task is to nurture relationshiops with cooperative employees and department heads, board members and delegates, neighboring cooperatives and buyers of the cooperative's products.

"My goal," said the new chief, "will focus on meeting the challenges related to our changing environment."

For Hand, the evening marked transistion; for Quigley and Honan, a fond farewell.

Quigley, a Rosemont resident, was honored for 30 years of service with the 3,200-member cooperative. Retiring in mid-1983, Quigley served as management assistant to Honan.

Webster defines "dynamic" as pertaining to effective action and as the accolades rolled in for Inter-State's retiring general manager, the co-op's 1982 annual theme, "Dyanmic at 65," easily could

Maximum trap size in Pa. is 6½-inches

HARRISBURG — Pennsylvania trappers are reminded by the Game Commission that under provisions of the Game Law, except for underwater beaver sets, traps used in the state may be no larger than 6½ inches.

Section 603 of the Game Law provides that it is unlawful to use a trap "with a jaw spread exceeding six and one-half inches, except a body-gripping trap with a jaw spread not exceeding ten inches may be used for taking beaver provided an underwater set is made..."

Several trap manufacturers are currently marketing "6-inch" body-gripping traps, but the devices are illegal because they are actually larger. Some traps advertised as "6-inch" measure 6 and 5/8 to 6 and 3/4 inches. Sometimes the measurement is nearly 7 inches. These are illegal devices for taking furbearers.

Trappers are urged to measure traps before purchasing or using them. Traps must not measure more than 6½ inches (outside jaw spread) to be legal devices.

Trappers questioning legal implications on how traps must be measured are advised that some years ago the Pennsylvania Superior Court ruled: "measurement referred to in the Act (Game Law) is the measurement of the outside spread of the jaw." Under this interpretation, the thickness of the metal bands forming the jaws must be included in the measurement.

courteously, efficiently, and when you need it.

Delivering feed is not a nine-to-five fair weather job. Your livelihood depends on timely feed deliveries, and we spare no effort to get your delivery to you when you need it. To hold delivery costs down, we maintain our own staff of experienced and trained mechanics, and we buy diesel fuel and other operating supplies in bulk quantities at the most reasonable cost.

Pennfield's driver program is unique in the feed industry. In addition to comprehensive and frequently tested driving skills, our drivers have training in customer relations, materials handling, and proper care of equipment.

Pennfield has earned a leadership position in the development and use of safe, cost-effective maintenance and delivery programs. But the real test of our skills and our service comes when our driver pulls up to your feed bin.

We feel our reputation is in good hands.

But it's more than boars and gilts. It's a complete breeding program aimed at making you a winner.

REDUCE FEED COSTS WITH

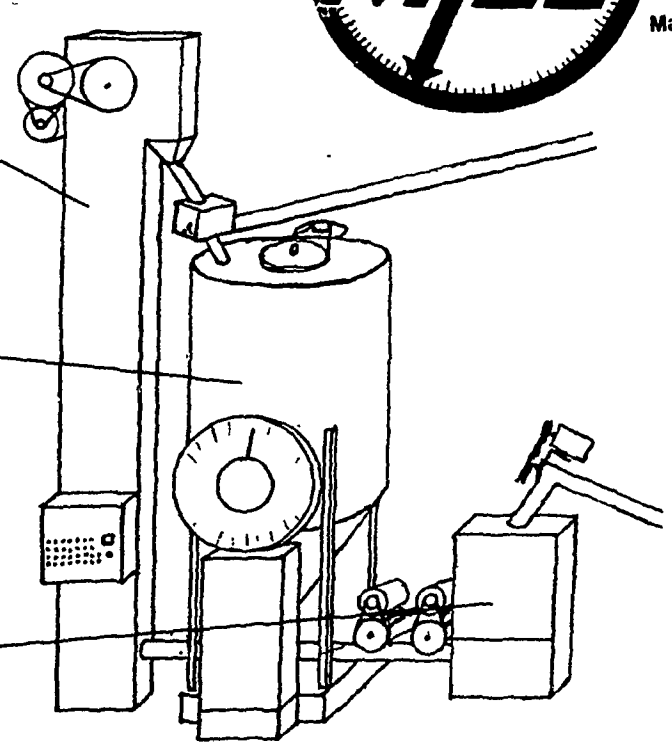
Master Mill™

Formerly Martin Automatic Milling System

BUCKET ELEVATOR
- Galvanized construction
- Low horsepower requirement

VERTICAL MIXER
- Galvanized construction
- Steep slope hopper eliminates feed channeling

HAMMER MILL
- Powerful magnets remove metal before entering grinding compartment



Safety circuits will stop the complete system if any part of the system malfunctions.

The Master Mill automatically grinds, mixes and delivers up to 5 different rations to your bins as needed. Ground corn and up to 7 other ingredients are individually augered into the mixer to each prescribed weight. The rotation of feed through the bucket elevator and mixer auger thoroughly mixes all ingredients for 5 minutes. Discharge augers then deliver the feed to designated feed tanks.

Tougher border patrol

Cattle feeders in Pennsylvania had somewhat of a surprise this fall as they traveled out of state to buy their feeders. What they found out was that various livestock auctions, in particularly Virginia markets, were telling Pennsylvania buyers they could no longer buy feeder bulls and heifers and bring them back across state lines.

Blaming it on a new law that somehow was sneaked through during the pre-election flurry, several farmers questioned how such a law could have been pushed through unbeknowns to them. We were curious, too.

Checking in with the state's Bureau of Animal Industry, we learned from Dr. Max Van Buskirk about a letter sent out to the ag departments of other states notifying them of a change in policy in Pennsylvania, effective Oct. 1. The letter read:

"Cattle, except feeder steers and spayed heifers and those for immediate slaughter, imported into Pennsylania must be accompanied by an approved interstate health certificate and meet the Pennsylvania import requirements.

"It has been the policy of the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture to permit the importation of 'feeder' heifers and bulls without health certificates or identification.

"Because of the USDA-APHIS regulations that permit the interstate movement of heifers and bulls from quarantined herds and the difficulty in maintaining surveillance of those imported feeders, it has become necessary to enforce our present regulations so that feeder heifers and bulls must meet the same requirements as breeding animals as stated in the Pennsylvania Code, Title 7, Sections 3.21 and 3.22."

When asked why the state decided it was time to toughen up on imported cattle, Van Buskirk pointed out that Pennsylvania is within a few months of being designated brucellosis-free, a major landmark in our state's animal health history. And rather than risk the chance of possible carriers coming into the cattle herds of Pennsylvania through the purchase of feeder bulls and heifers who might later be saved for breeding, Van Buskirk said the decision was made to enforce the law which has been on the books for quite some time.

In order to be imported into Pennsylvania, the law states that cattle, goats, and even buffalo must meet the following criteria:

- Cattle that originate from Canada or from any other state shall be from a herd that is negative to a brucellosis blood test conducted within 12 months of but not less than 90 days prior to entry; or shall originate from a herd that had a negative milk ring test conducted within six months of but not less than 90 days prior to entry. . . . In addition, the individual animals to be imported shall have a negative brucellosis test conducted within 30 days of entry for all animals except steers, official vaccinates under 14 months of age, and unvaccinated calves under six months. No test is required if the animal originated from a certified brucellosis-free herd.

The law also covers tuberculosis requirements and applies to cattle, goats, and buffalo as follows:

- No test is required if the animals originate from tuberculosis accredited-free herds;
- All other imported cattle, goats, and buffalo — except those for immediate slaughter — and feeder steers are required to be tested with negative results within 60 days of entry. There is no age exemption.

Pennsylvania's efforts to control the spread of contagious diseases, like TB and brucellosis, will affect breedable cattle being shipped in from certain states — generally those that are more lax or even negligent in their disease eradication efforts. But, there are reputable herds in reptutable, brucellosis-free states who will be happy to sell feeder heifers and bulls to those Pennsylvania farmers who wish to raise them.

Running down a federal list of each state's brucellosis status, the PDA veterinarian cited the following "free" states: Alaska, Connecticut, Hawaii, Maine, Maryland, Michigan, New Hampshire, New York, North Carolina, North Dakota, and Rhode Island.

Those states which fall into the same category as Pennsylvania with "low-risk" infections of brucellosis include: Delaware, Ohio, Virginia, West Virginia, and New Jersey.

States with an "intermediate risk" rating are: Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Kansas, Kentucky, Missouri, Nevada, Oklahoma, Tennessee, parts of Texas and parts of Florida. And several states with "real problems" and "higher risk" statuses are: Mississippi, Louisiana, and the remaining portions of Texas and Florida.

Van Buskirk mentioned that for those Pennsylvania breeders who wish to continue buying feeder heifers and bulls and who operate strictly a feeding operation, it will still be possible to import animals from out of state. However, the entire herd will be placed under quarantine either until it is tested disease-free or until the cattle move to slaughter.

Some may call this "border-protection" aggrevating; but in the fight to stamp out brucellosis and other diseases in Pennsylvania, it's an asset. And, although it may cost cattle producers a few cents more now in disease-prevention "insurance," it will save the industry hundreds of dollars in the long run.

RAISING UP JUDGES

November 14, 1982

Background Scripture:
Judges 1 through 2.
Devotional Reading:
Joshua 24:19-29.

We often have a hard time deciding what we really want from God. On the one hand, like the Israelites of old, we pray fervently that God will "raise up among us leaders as of old." We ask the Lord to send us godly ment who will lead us as Moses and Joshua led the people of Israel. Yet, nothing so disturbs us as a leader who does not say and do what we want him or her to say and do.

Yet They Did Not Listen

That's one of the themes evident in the Book of Judges: the people want a leader sent from God, but frequently they refuse to follow that leadership when it is given. As the writer of Judges tells us, "Then the Lord raised up judges, who saved them out of the power of those who plundered them. And yet they did not listen to their judges" (2:16,17-italics mine).

We need to remember who these "judges" were. Essentially, they were not judges in the judiciary sense, but military heroes who, in recognition of their deeds in time of national crisis, were entrusted with governmental powers during their own lifetime. Because they appeared to be gifted by God to save the people of Israel from enemies, this special endowment was honored. And it seemed to work reasonably well. When the people followed their leadership, things went pretty well with the Hebrews.

Unfortunately, there were many times when people didn't follow their leadership. Sometimes they followed the judges until they died and then "did what was evil in the sight of the Lord," but other times they did so even while the judge was alive.

So long as their judges saved them in times of crisis and so long as their government did not interfer with the desires of the people, everything was all right. But when the Israelites decided that they wanted to worship the Baals of their neighbors and were opposed by their judges, that is when the people decided they did not want their judges and their judgements.

Their Stubborn Ways

Is that not true of us as well? We pray God to send us leaders to save us in times of national peril, but when things have returned to what we call "normal," we want to do things our way. The writer of Judges says, "whenever the judge died, they turned back and behaved worse than their fathers, going after other gods, serving them and bowing down to them; they did not drop any of their practices or their stubborn ways" (2:19).

People want God to save them, but not govern them. They want their leaders to speak for God but do what they want them to do. The reason: they do not want to "drop any of their practices or their stubborn ways."

There is nothing wrong in asking God to raise up leaders for us, so long as we remember that we may get what we ask for.

To Appreciate Farm-City Week

Each farmer is a very important person. While we have fewer farmers than ever before, the growing population demands more food. Never have so many persons been so dependent on so few.

Farm-City week is being observed November 19-25 to bring a better understanding of problems existing between the rural and urban segments of our society. Some people may think that agriculture is a diminishing industry, but this is not true. There are fewer farmers but each farmer is now producing enough food to feed 67 people. In Russia that ratio is one to seven.

Over one-fifth of the state's work force is employed in agriculture related manufacturing, wholesale and retail trades. Even more workers are employed in the industries providing seed, feed, fertilizer and other supplies used in farm production. We urge you to take part in Farm-City Week events.

To Excercise Dairy Cows

I know that many of our dairy farmers keep their milking cows confined to the stall barn much of the time. This is easy to do when you are short of labor during the winter months. In order to have a healthy herd, the cows should be allowed outside to excercise daily unless severe weather conditions exist. The excercise will not only keep their feet and legs in better condition, but will permit the cows in heat to be detected; this is often a problem when cows are kept confined too much of the time.

If the herd is turned out for 15 to 30 minutes each day, the time involved will be very worthwhile. You'll find very few days when the weather will interfere.

To Call the Veterinarian

Cattle feeders should not wait until the last minute or until a calf is down to call the veterinarian. This practice greatly reduces the chances of that calf's survival, lowers your profit potential and disturbs every veterinarian who has handled such cases.

The weather this year has been ideal so far for importing cattle into the county and sicknesses have been minimal. But poorer weather conditions are ahead and many cattle are yet to arrive in local feedlots.

By using your eyesight, a headgate (yes, a headgate) and a rectal thermometer, you can reduce sickness problems, death losses, and a frustrated veterinarian.

Observe cattle at least twice daily and if possible move them from one pen to another. You can easily pick out the stragglers, the heavy breathers, and the coughers, all of which are possibly sick.

Work these cattle through the headgate and record a rectal temperature. Treat according to your veterinarian's recommendations.

Remember to call the veterinarian early! Team work is the key to saving young feeder cattle, claims Chester D. Hughes, Extension Livestock Agent.

problem in strawberries for a number of years. Crown injury can be reduced by applying mulch to protect them for winter. The best time for application is from mid-November to mid-December. The exact date depends on weather conditions. But a good rule of thumb is to apply mulch when the temperature begins to stay around 20 to 25 degrees F. If it drops to 15 degrees or lower, unprotected strawberry crowns could be injured. In any case, it's a good idea to mulch the plants after they have been exposed to a few good freezes. Mulching is a very good practice to insure a better crop next summer.

U.S. enters computer age crop stewardship

Plant scientist Quentin Jones, of the USDA's Agricultural Research Service said recently at the National Wheat Research Conference that the National Plant Germplasm System — combining the best of U.S. botanical sciences with computer technology — is moving the nation toward better stewardship of its plant genetic resources.

Plant germplasm refers collectively to genes or units of heredity that determine plant traits, such as growth habits, nutritional values of edible plant parts, or diseases resistance.

Stimulated largely by a near national disaster - the 1970 epidemic of corn leaf blight — federal, state and private organizations created the National Plant Germplasm System eight years ago to help offset so-called 'genetic vulnerability' of modern crops.

According to Jones, who is National Coordinator of NPGS, national and in some cases world trends have led to a few high-yielding varieties dominating overall production of certain crops. Such uniform varieties often replace more traditional types, with the result that unique traits useful for adapting varieties to changing conditions can be lost forever.

Simply put, the NPGS is an attempt to insure that plant breeders and other scientists have a diversity of plant germplasm to continue to make crops more productive.

Jones provided an update of the system for many of the nation's wheat growers, as well as agricultural scientists, and industry and government officials attending the first National Wheat Research Conference. The coordinated System, he said, is already more efficient and workable than the haphazard assortment of previously independent research and collection stations that have joined the NPGS.

A computer-assisted Germplasm Resources Information Network is the central nervous system of the NPGS, Jones said. When fully operational, GRIN will provide both 'suppliers' and 'demanders' of germplasm with abundant date on over 400,000 accessions of germplasm in the form of seed and vegetatively propagated stock. Many of the accessions are wild or semi-wild progenitors of today's crop plants and other 'unimproved' germplasm that will extremely valuable to breeders in the future.

Suppliers (7,000 to 15,000 new accessions are added each year) acquire, maintain and distribute plant germplasm and date. Major suppliers include plant collection curators and staffs of various USDA plant introduction stations. Demanders or users of the NPGS include plant breeders, scientists and nurserymen.

Jones told the Wheat Conference audience that some GRIN hardware is installed and that USDA Regional Plant Introduction Stations are loading the Network with data.

"Though we now have more access to germ plasm data, the NPGS needs to increase its human resources," said Jones. "For example, we need more evaluation and enhancement of NPGS stock". With collections of such living materials as seeds, there is periodic need to remove samples for field evaluation, and to improve the quality and quantity of seed accessions.

The National Plant Germplasm System also includes many advisory groups. Crop advisory committees, for example, provide research guidelines, and policy and management activities for a specific crop. The NPGS is also a major component of an international plant germplasm network.

For further information on the NPGS or its components, contact Stephen M. Berberich, USDA-ARS Public Information Specialist 301/344-3542.

"Henry" repeats KILE Angus victory

Diane Krause of Lehigh County is at the halter of her Reserve Champion Angus heifer, DSK Grand Erica 281. The early summer yearling, bred to PS Power Play, is joined in the winner's circle by show judge Randall Updike and Angus Queen Tammy Eisenhower.

Cecil Teets, a Beaver County breeder steered his November 1981 bull calf to the Senior Bull Calf title and then followed up with a Reserve Grand Champion Bull win. Tuesday's contest was the young bull's tanbark debut.

Show judge Randall Updike from Ohio State University went with a September 1981 heifer for grand champion. Millcreek Joy, sired by Alberta Jumbo GR, got the winning tap and is owned by Brian Hutchins of West Mansfield, Ohio.

Additional results of the KILE Angus Show follow:

Inter-State's Holly plant "turns the corner"

LANCASTER — In his address to approxmiately 500 delegates and alternates, Holly Milk Cooperative Plant Manager Rod McLeod summarized the past year as one of "challenge, change and achievement," at Inter-State Milk Producers' 65th annual meeting this week.

McLeod said the year started with change at the highest level: the outright purchase of the plant from Maryland Cooperative Milk Producers', and sole ownership by Inter-State Milk Producers' Cooperative.

At the beginning of the year "the goal was to reorganize, consolidate and bring the operation into a 'break even' situation within twelve months," he said.

To achieve this goal, the management team was strengthened and reorganized during the first half of the year, with the addition of manufacturing, technical, and engineering managers, McLeod said. The first six months were spent in identifying and analyzing problems and implementing corrective action, he said.

"By May, a glimmer of light could be seen at the end of the tunnel; attitudes changed, confidence was regained and progress was steady and rewarding with the 'break even' point being achieved in the June operation," McLeod said.

In the June-July period, 95 percent of butter and powder qualified for the AA grade, McLeod said. Also during the June-July period more than 85 percent of the butter produced was successfully packaged into print for Land O' Lakes, establishing Holly's reputation as a high quality member of the Land O' Lakes Cooperative, he added.

"The improvement in quality has provided a solid base to produce more profitable product lines in the future," McLeod said.

Other improvements to the milk plant included the installation of two 60,000 gallon raw milk storage silos, an automatic microprocessor controlled truck tank CIP system and a freezer with a capacity in excess of 800,000 pounds of butter. A new truck drivers' lounge was also constructed.

"At the beginning of the year our wastewater treatment plant was undoubtedly one of the most critical issues that we faced," McLeod said. The size of the operation, high biological oxygen demand of milk and sensitive ecological balance of the immediate environment were all unique, he continued.

McLeod said substantial investment in both manpower and capital went into the plant during the year and full regulatory compliance was achieved during the month of July.

"With the corner turned and an eye to the future, plans have been prepared and funds budgeted to ensure that the plant reflects our commitment to efficiency and quality," McLeod said.

KAUFFMAN — Ray and Stewart Hollenshead, Mercersburg, topped the list of dairymen at the Franklin County DHIA banquet last week.

The Hollensheads were named the top herd in the county with a production record of 21,030 pounds of milk and 789 pounds of fat, milking 32 animals.

William Swailes, Willow Hill, captured the award for the "Most Improved Herd in Butterfat over the past three testing years." The high herd over 100 cows award was presented to Oakleigh Farm of Mercersburg. The Oakleigh Farm milks 105 cows and this year had a milk average of 18,832 with 736 pounds of fat.

Capturing the award of "High Cow in Milk Production" was Mry-Lea Farms of Greencastle. To win the award their cow produced a record of 30,029 pounds of milk.

Oakleigh Farm received the only award for "lifetime production over 200,000." Oakleigh Farm Helen Helene produced a record of 204,757 pounds of milk with 7,245 pounds of fat in nine lactations to win the only lifetime award presented in the county this year.

Three dairy were recognized for their oustanding butterfat production records of 700 pounds and over. Ray and Stewart Hollensheads Number 1 herd stepped to the top of the list with a record of 789 pounds of fat. Second on the list was Frank Heberlig, Newburg, with a production record of 773 pounds of fat and 20,461 pounds of milk with 43 cows. Ray and Stewart Hollenshead also took third place with their Number 2 herd, milking 53 cows and producing a record of 754 pounds of fat and 19,710 pounds of milk.

With over 250 members and guests in attendance at the Annual DHIA Banquet, the members elected tow new directors to the Board. The new directors are Jaye Young and J. Daniel Young.

Lebanon County honors top milk-makers

BY DONNA TOMMELLEO

LEBANON — Members of the Lebanon County Dairy Herd Improvement Association convened, Tuesday, to honor dairy farmers who have made production gains.

In addition, the group presented a special service award to Lebanon County Extension Dairy Agent Newton Bair, who also reported on the county's progress.

"For the first time ever, the county has exceeded 16,000 pounds of milk per cow. We have more than 10,000 cows on test," Bair said.

However, in light of the crippling surplus in the nation which will probably result in lower milk prices, Bair was quick to comment.

"I just hope we don't produce ourselves out of a job. But it is gratifying, year after year, to increase our efficiency as the number of cows on test increase," he said.

Cumberland DHIA honors top producers

BY BETH HEMMINGER
Staff Correspondent

NEWVILLE — The 63rd Annual Cumberland County Dairy Herd Improvement Association Banquet brought together Cumberland County's dairy farmers for an evening of fine food, entertainment and the presentation of some special awards.

Ferman Landis "stole the show" at the banquet as he collected three awards during the evenings ceremonies. Landis, of Boiling Springs, won the first award for the highest herd butterfat production during the past year. His 40 registered and grade Holsteins produced a record of 769 pounds of fat, the highest ever recorded in the county, with a milk average of 20,001 pounds of milk and a 3.8 percent test.

The award for the highest cow in butterfat also went to Landis. His cow produced a record of 1,062 pounds of fat with 22,223 pounds of milk and 4.8 percent test. And, Landis won his final award for the county's highest increase in production of fat and milk over his last year's record.

Sundays Vallilea Farms, Carlisle, captured the high herd in milk production with a record of 20,140 pounds of milk. Sundays Vallilea Farms milk 132 registered and grade Holsteins which pump out a butterfat record of 701 pounds.

Landis and Sundays Vallilea Farms broke the record in fat and milk production. Their herds produced the highest records ever recorded in the DHIA program in Cumberland County.

The high cow in milk production award went to Marlin E. Miller and Sons of Carlisle. The Miller's cow produced 28,871 pounds of milk, the highest individual milk average ever recorded in the county, followed with 835 pounds of fat and 2.9 test.

Carl Kelso, Jr., of Shippensburg, won the award for the two year old with the highest milk production record. Kelso's two year old recorded an average of 21,437 pounds of milk to win the award. J. Paul Strock, Mechanicsburg, won the highest two year old in butterfat with his animal producing 782 pounds of fat.

Two farmers received recognition for the highest "Lifetime Butterfat Production Records" in the county for this year.

Frena Penstate Jessie owned by Mark Naugle held the highest lifetime-butterfat record in the county to date producing 9,064 pounds of fat. Naugle's animal produced this record in 13 lactations with a milk average of 220,521. This is the final record for Naugle's cow.

M. Thomas Sheaffer's, Ge-Val Fond General Penny holds the second highest lifetime-butterfat record producing 8,451 pounds of fat in 10 lactations. Sheaffer's animal also has a milk record of 222,164 pounds during that period of time.

The five high herds in butterfat and milk were recognized. Ferman Landis stood in first place as previously mentioned. Sunday's Vallilea Farms took second place on the list, milking 132 animals with a production record of 20,140 pounds of milk and 701 pounds of fat.

M. Thomas Sheaffer, Carlisle, captured third place with his 55 registered Holsteins with a production record of 18,802 pounds of milk and 690 pounds of fat. Standing in fourth place was Berkheimer Farms, Mechanicsburg, with a milk average of 18,198 pounds and 687 pounds of fat. Edward Breckbill of Mechanicsburg captured fifth place with a herd average of 17,239 pounds of milk and 676 pounds of fat.

According to Harold Boldosser, manager and treasurer of Cumberland County DHIA Program, 135 herds completed the testing year with an increase of 12 herds from last year. Those 135 herds consisted of 7,354 animals with an increase of 800 animals from last year.

Richard Mains and Samuel Shenk were re-elected to serve as directors for another one-year term.

During Purina Dairy Days

Dairy specialists discuss nutrition, fertility, profitability

BY SALLY BAIR
Staff Correspondent

SMOKETOWN — Larry Prewitt, manager of applied nutrition and dairy research for the Ralston Purina Company, told dairy farmers this week that a good breeding program offers the opportunity to improve profitability in the herd.

He said the cost of infertility, in terms of milk not produced, calves not conceived, replacements needed and veterinary services, can become an "astronomical figure."

Speaking at a Dairy Day sponsored by Purina for area dairy farmers and dealers, Prewitt said efficient reproduction will get more calves per year, producing more opportunity genetically to get high-producing cows. There will be more milk per cow and therefore more money.

Prewitt said if calving intervals can be reduced by 30 days, profits will increase. Using a 100-cow herd as an example, Prewitt said, a 30-day reduction in calving interval would bring in an extra 130,000 pounds of milk and with income for milk based on $13 per hundred it would mean an additional $18,200 without adding another cow.

Nutrition and management are the two most important factors in getting cows bred, according to Prewitt, and he suggested to dairy producers that they set 13 months as a calving interval goal.

Cows lose weight immediately after calving and research shows it is harder to get cows bred when they are losing weight. Prewitt recommended increasing the nutrient concentration slow down the loss of body weight. That program will maintain a higher production level over the rest of the lactation as well as making it easier to get the cow rebred, he said.

"Don't try to save on feed on dry cows," Prewitt advised, "because dry cows are the key to getting animals bred. A good dry cow program will help reduce stress." He said stress will increase the likelihood of getting a cystic condition.

Observing heat is important in a successful breeding program, and Prewitt noted that 68 percent of cows come in heat between 6 p.m. and 6 a.m. He said a farmer should go through the barn first thing in the morning before milking or feeding and observe heat signs, and go through again after the morning milking. Another fifteen minutes before milking in the afternoon should be devoted to looking for signs of heat, and another period should be spent before going into supper or going to bed, he said.

The best time to breed cows, according to Prewitt is in the final ten hours of standing heat or the first 10 hours after standing heat. Then she is ovulating and is likely to conceive he said.

He added reproductive goals should be a 70-percent conception rate at first breeding and 1.3 services per conception. Also reproductive difficulties should be no greater than 10 percent, and a 12.5-13 month calving interval is a realistic goal.

Prewitt recommended animals be bred according to body weight, not age. A Holstein and Brown Swiss should be bred at 750 pounds which will be about 14 months. Ayrshires should be bred at 650 pounds, or 13 months, and Guernseys should be bred at 550 pounds which will be about 12 months. Jerseys also should be about 550 pounds, which will be about 11 months.

Underfeeding of energy and protein also can contribute to problems in breeding, Prewitt said. It is vitally important to have the proper balance of protein, energy, vitamins and minerals.

He called high-producing cows more of a challenge to feed because "they can hold only so much of their nutrient demands. It is a challenge to get more in and maintain her efficiency."

He concluded, "I have often said 'cows are better bred than they are fed.' They need the right nutrients at the right time. But proper nutrition must be coupled with proper management. Our programs are designed to look at both. Everything we used has been tried on our herd."

District Manager Gene Hubbard discussed the total mixed ration feeding approach, saying that with a grain and roughage combination "every bite has energy, minerals, vitamins and proteins."

The advantage of TMR program, he said, is that is easy, especially if roughage is being fed in a bunk. If offers better utilization, partly because a cow is usually given a longer period of the day in which to eat the ration, and slower passage through the digestive tract is desirable. There is improved intake, according to Hubbard, because the blend may encourage a cow to eat more, and there will be higher production, especially if there has been a problem getting cows to eat enough grain.

He said under and overfeeding may be the biggest pitfall, if cows are grouped because sometimes the 90-pound producer can't get enough to eat to meet her demands. Hubbard noted that a cow producing 30 pounds of milk should eat 37 pounds of total dry matter, while an 80-pound producer needs 53.4 pounds of dry matter.

If a ration is balanced for 50 pounds of milk, Hubbard said it would contain 38 pounds of corn silage, 24 pounds of haylage, three pounds of hay, 17 pounds of ear corn and three pounds of 38 percent concentration. This is 85 pounds or 44 pounds of dry matter. "If you are feeding one group total TMR, the high producing cows will not voluntarily make up their needs," he cautioned.

Purina District Manager Gene Hubbard discussed ration formulation during Tuesday's dairy workshop.

During Pennfield's Dairy Days

McCauley shares breeding tips

LANCASTER — Basic, sound managment practices are what will make a dairy farmer's breeding program work, according to Allan McCauley, DVM and president of Em Tran, Elizabethtown. McCauley was one of speakers at Dairy Days held on Monday and Tuesday at the Farm and Home Center, sponsored by Pennfield Feeds.

McCauley said, "My philosophy about reproductive programs is simple. Mother Nature has things planned pretty good. Don't interfere."

Those are interesting words from a veterinarian whose work is devoted to programming donors cows and recovering embryos for transplant. Nevertheless, he made it clear that "natural" is better and he offered points which any dairy farmer must consider for a successful breeding program.

"I have no blanket recommendations. Each herd is different with different goals and different production levels," he said. He added that the human element is of supreme importance, noting "a person should care about cows or not be around them. Take excellent care of your cows."

The time to begin the breeding program is when the calf is born, he advised. "I believe in strict calf raising measures to get every ounce of growth from the calf by the time it is ready to breed."

McCauley said, "The cow decides when she is ready to cycle and when she is ready to conceive. You can't change that." In high-producing cows, the cow will conceive when she is in a positive energy balance and until then, he said, "it's a waste of semen to breed her even if she is cycling."

In a breeding program there is no substitute for accurate heat detection, no matter what method is used. "The individual is critical in having it work." He noted that most heats occur at odd moments, usually between 6 p.m. and 6 a.m., but he said the dollar return per minute of time spent observing heats is great. He added. "Twenty percent of the cows bred are really not in heat."

McCauley also made it clear that he doesn't feel every dairyfarmer is qualified to do his own artificial breeding. "Some owner-breeders have some pretty poor conception rates. AI technicians as a group do an excellent job. And if you try it and it's not working don't be too stubborn to go back to the old way."

Sound nutrition plays a part in any breeding program and McCauley urged proper dry cow management, along with proper calving. "You can't be too careful at calving. A clean stall and a person should be there, and if you need to assist in calving you should be very clean. Don't cut corners. What happens at calving may very well influence her entire reproductive life in the future."

Later, he said, "Outside on the grass is the absolutely best place to calve a cow." If a cow is calved out properly and handled properly, she will be on the road to convieve again."

While McCauley said cattle should be under a veterinarian's care, with systematic examination of cows, he stressed that routine pregnancy checks are probably not necessary. Pregnancy exams, according to him, are the least important part of any reproductive program. If your heat detection is up to snuff and if the cows are bred properly and don't return to heat, they are probably pregnant."

Dairy farmers from around the Lancaster County area participated in the two-day dairy sessions sponsored by Pennfield Feeds. They heard from several experts in the dairy business, including, from left, Dr. Allan McCauley, president of Em Tran, Elizabethtown; Lancaster Extension Agent Glenn Shirk; and Dr. Lester Volker, ass't director of veterinary services for Norden Laboratories.

He stressed post partum checks to make sure the uterus is involuting properly and the cow is ready to cycle. About retained placentas, he said, "Let Mother Nature clean it when she is ready." The placenta is meant to pass through the cervix and if it is not passed, it is the only thing that will keep the cervix dilated and allow it to drain properly.

He also noted that only "gentle fingers" should be working inside a cow.

He said dairy farmers should learn what normal discharges are, adding, "I am an absolute believer in treatment when it is indicated and none when none indicated."

Dairy producers today are fortunate to have drugs which do things as nature does them, according to McCauley. He said prostaglandin, which is a whole family of drugs, can work well when used properly. One of the drugs, FA Alpha is a compound that occurs in nature. He called it an outstanding drug to help cows cycle.

Another drug, used mostly with older cows is gonadodrophic releasing hormone or GNRH is also usetul. "We don't take chances with missed ovulations," he noted.

The veterinarian's role in the reproductive program, he said, is as an important part of the management team, and cannot make up for good management. The person who is with the cows every day is the most important member of the team."

Touching briefly on his work with embryo transfers, McCauley said candidly "It is not for every dairyman. I cannot see a mediocre cow being transferred — it must be a super cow. It will be a long time before we get transters routinely

Bradford Holstein Club second largest in Pa.

BY JANE BRESEE
Staff Correspondent

TOWANDA — The Bradford County Holstein Club heard linear classification explained at their annual meeting held last Wednesday at the Towanda Country Club with 80 members present.

Mel Hertzler, manager of Area I of the state Holstein Association, stated that linear classification will provide dairymen with the means to use trait evaluation as a guide to selecting sires to improve production, increase the number of profitable lactations, and ultimately realize more profit on the farm.

Hertzler predicted that linear classification information will be included in the sire summaries by July 1984.

Richard Kingsley, president of the club, announced that membership had risen from 317 last year to 334 members by July 1, 1982 placing Bradford County as the second largest club in the state next to Lancaster County.

Ben Jackson, Jim Howard, and Lynn Miller were reelected as directors for another three-year term.

Valarie Moon, Bradford County Dairy Princess, spoke briefly saying she knew the value of selective breeding as she is looking forward with great excitement to the calving of one of her own register Holstein cows.

David Moon, president of the Sul-Bra Breeders Holstein Club, thanked club members, James Howard and George Page, Jr., for their help with the Sul-Bra Sell-a-Brations Sale held in Troy in October. Moon stated that another sale is being planned for next year. Moon also praised Roger D. Wilcox, owner of the high cow in the sale, Fivebrooks Arlinda Pearl which sold for $19,000.

Some highlights of the year's activities, according to Kingsley, were the county spring tour, a three-day bus tour to Canada. the summer picnic, and the District show. Expenditures included a gift of $1,000 to the Linda Hulslander 4-H Memorial Building at the Troy Fairgrounds, the purchase of numerous trophies for 4-H cattle show events, and the improvement of the cow-washing facilities at the Troy Fairgrounds.

Lancaster Holstein

Junior project chairman Gary Akers presented awards to Mark Welk, R1 Peach Bottom, and Leonard Stoltzfus, R1 Gap, for the junior milk and fat competition.

Leonard Stoltzfus, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Stoltzfus, won both milk and fat for the two year old class with "Speckle" with a record of 17,465 milk and 640 pounds of fat. he also got the award in the aged cow class for milk production with Sparkle, the dam of Speckle, with a record of 26,843.

Mark, son of Mr. & Mrs. Paul Welk, received the award for milk and fat for three year olds with "Milu" and a record fo 15,369 milk and 688 fat. He got the aged cow award for Dee with 980 pounds of fat.

John Howard, chairman of the Conestoga Classic, presented an award to Paul Welk for having the highest-selling animal at the sale at $3,600. It was purchased by President Lamar Witmer who was on hand to help present the trophy. Howard also announced that the Conestoga Classic, one of the highest averaging sales in the state, will become an annual event.

Extension Dairy Agent Glenn Shirk encouraged the dairymen to "be creative and innovative" in promoting milk. "We're condemned for the surplus when we should be condemned for the lack of promotion. Don't be ashamed of your product."

He suggested they should work on developing new products for the market. "We should promote milk with the same zeal our competitors promote junk products," he concluded.

Executive Director Bill Nichol congratulated Lancaster County on being the "largest Holstein club in the world." He encouraged participation in the Spring sales and show, and called the All-American Dairy show and eastern National show in Harrisburg.

A fervent football fan, Nichol related that in Washington state there will be an Apple Bowl when Washington State meets Washington University. He suggested that it would be a great promotion for Penn State to have a "Dairy Bowl."

State Director Jay Landis urged members to renew their membership by Dec. 1 to receive a 5 percent savings. Memberships received by Jan. 15 will gain a $2 rebate per member for the club's treasury. The goal established for Lancaster County this year is 779 members, 43 more than last year, it was noted.

If that goal is reached by Jan. 15 the club will get $200. If it is reached by July 1, there will be a $100 given to the club. Landis encouraged members to attend the state convention to be held in Erie in Feb. 24-26.

Entertainment was provided by "Mr. Pennsylvania," Pete Wambach, colorful radio personality known as the "voice of Pennsylvania" through his radio programs carried by 89 stations. His inspirational talk provided a lot of information about the things that make Pennsylvania a great place to live.

YORKANA — Gerald and Joyce Buser's hogs, all 1,200 head of them, will be receiving visitors next weekend, as the York Chamber of Commerce sponsors its annual Farm-City week agriculture tour.

The R12 York modern pork production facility is one of four agriculture enterprises in the Hellam-Wrightsville area opening their doors to the public on Sunday, Nov. 21. From 1 through 4 p.m., several hundred are expected at the Buser farm, a nearby dairy operation and two horse breeding facilities.

Commodity groups from the county will be on hand at the various farms with literature and food samples for tour visitors.

While the hog production confinement set-up at the Buser farm does not permit any outsiders to enter, the open-sided facility allows easy viewing of the hogs, progressing from the eight week size to the fully-matured groups ready for market.

Groups of approximately 350 enter the long barn filled with pen sections, remain in each growth section about one month, and finish to their 220-pound market size in an average 16 weeks. Total production of up to 4,000 hogs annually is contracted to Delmarva Farms, based in Delaware.

The 200 acres on the Buser farm are cropped mostly to corn, which is ground and mixed with concentrates for hog rations.

Just east on Route 124 from the Buser farm is Big T Holstein farm, the dairy operation of Thomas and Theresa Stein. The Steins new tie-stall barn houes a dairy herd of nearly 100, plus young stock. Of special interest to visitors is the picket-fence type manure handling system.

One of the largest breeders of the smooth-riding Paso Fino riding horses is a third stop on the driving tour. Fieldstone Meadows, at R1 Wrightsville, is owned by Art and Less Glatfelter, and can be reached from Route 124 at Craley to Route 425 and Richmond Road.

Lauxmont Farms encompasses 1,400 acres on a plateau overlooking the Susquehanna River, south of Wrightsville. Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Kohr bred standardbred race horses, and on view in the pastures will be broodmares, foals and yearlings.

Lebanon 4-H Board reorganizes

Other officers elected were: Jack Reed, vice-chairman; Judy LeRoy, secretary; John Balmer, treasurer; and Loretta Noll, assistant secretary.

Mike Firestine, Manpower Committee chairman, introduced new members of the Board. They are: Troy Funk, Loretta Noll, and Lori Ressor - 4-H Teens; Barbara Grumbine and Judy LeRoy - 4-H Leaders. Adults serve 3-year terms and teens serve one-year terms renewable to a total of three years.

Other business included self-nomination to standing committees.

Joins Jaindl Farms Family

Lehigh Ag Equipment, formerly Chapman Equipment Center, Wescosville, officially has joined the Jaindl Farm Family on Nov. 1. Under the new ownership, the facility, just west of Allentown, will continue to be an authorized sales and service dealer for John Deere agricultural equipment, lawn and garden products. With Tom Tompkins as manager and an experienced staff in parts, service and sales, the new division of Jaindl's Farms, of Orefield, will serve farmers within a 200-mile radius of the Lehigh Valley.

on commercial herds. We must refine technology and make it cheaper." He added that they work only with registered animals. Offspring from an animal should have the potential worth of $3,000, and preferably $4,000 or $5,000 to make it worth while.

County Extension agent Glenn Shirk spoke about another concern for dairy farmers — water. "Water is the 'feed' cows get most of he told the group. "You know the quality of your feed, but when is the last time you measured the water intake or tested your water? Water quality is important and so is water intake."

He noted that cows should consume 4 1/2 gallons of water for each pound of milk produced daily. They drink about one-fourth of their body weight each day, which means over 30 gallons of water.

Temperature and availability of water affect a cow's intake, and since there is often electricity around water feeders, dairy producers should check water bowls for stray voltage. Taste and odors also will affect how much a cow drinks.

"There is a lot of pressure on land," Shirk noted, pointing out there are five times as many cows on Lancaster County farms as when they were originally settled. There also are more cattle on fewer acres. Lancaster County has the second-most highest numbers of cows per square mile in the United States. Considering all the beef, poultry, swine also produced in the county, dairy animals make up less than half the animal population. "We produce enough manure to have 13 tons per crop per acre per year," Shirk said.

He said nitrates are a major concern in water because they are water soluble, and because animals are consuming them both from feed and water. Manure should be tested and fertilizer rates must be known because there is a maximum level of nitrates which can be tolerated. The level is much lower for calves and babies than for cows and humans, he said.

Bacterial contamination is another problem, and he urged dairy farmers to have water retested if the test results simply say the level is more than 10.

He urged farmers to test their water both at its source and at the place where the animals are drinking it. Problems must be solved at the source, and this could mean fencing off polluted areas "to protect your cows — your livelihood." New wells away from buildings may be another answer as well as treatment of contaminated water, a process which can be costly.

He said heard health problems can be a complex issue, and water can be one of the factors which is working to create problems.

Lester Volker, DVM and assistant director of veterinary services for Norden Laboratories discussed dairy vaccination programs, calling them a "management tool," but not a substitute for good management.

Volker said, "Each vaccination program must be tailor made — no one program is effective for every situation."

He urged dairy practitioners to practice veterinary economics, saying "If they can't make you money you should have reservations about calling them." He said a vaccination program has to involve all animals in a herd — cows, calves and heifers. "Vaccinations should be used to prevent disease and to maximize profits," he said.

Noting that heifers are often the forgotten animals on the farm, he suggested, "This is an excellent time to work in the beginning of a good immunization program."

He added that close observation and a little "tender, loving care" as well as nutrition are all important. "A program won't work if the animals are not fed properly. If the program isn't working, change it," he concluded.

Tim Horn, ruminant nutritionist, spoke on feeding her high yields and discussed a new Pennfield product, Pennfield Hi Yield Dairy Feeds. This new feed has added fat, B-Vitamin, amino acid and additional buffers along with the regular protection, energy, minerals, vitamins and buffers. He called high producing cows "a unique feeding challenge."

Also on the program was Don Mahlandt, dairy feed sales manager, who discussed cutting costs and improving profits.

Who is that man back in winner's circle?

BY DICK ANGLESTEIN

HARRISBURG — On Monday and Tuesday, I took a lot of photos of prize-winning swine at KILE.

After hours of squinting through a camera at balky boars and gallavanting gilts, all of the hogs start looking the same – even if some are white, red, black, belted, spotted or whatever.

But this week, I had a different problem.

After awhile, the people squatting behind the hogs started looking the same. This same man, with the baseball cap that said "The Belt" kept appearing in my viewfinder.

And well, he should have. John Strawbridge, of Strawbridge and McCleary, of Stewartstown, herded no less than nine boars, gilts or barrows into the winners' circle reserve for the top two finishing entries.

The York County breeder swept the top honors in the Yorkshire and Hampshire classes, showing the grand champion boar and gilt and the reserve grand champions in both divisions.

In addition, other honors included the premier exhibitor of the Hampshire Division and the Reserve Grand Champion Barrow on Foot.

And although results weren't available by press time, Strawbridge had a good shot at the carcass title – something he's won at least four times in the past.

In the Poland China Division, Rocky Acres Farm, New Tripoli, took top honors, with the grand champion boar and gilt and the reserve grand champion gilt.

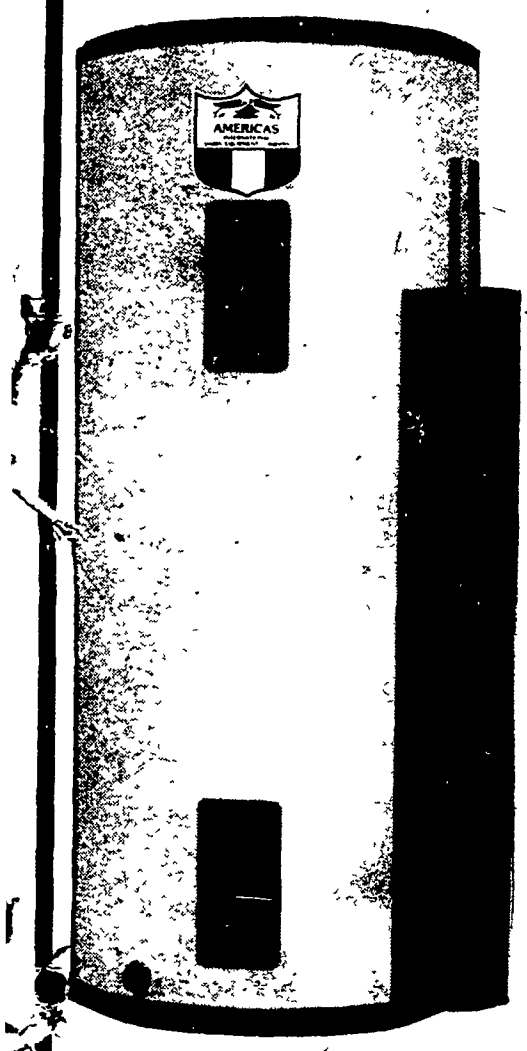
NU-PULSE MILKING SYSTEMS

"NU HEAT" Energy Saver



Why Throw Money & Energy Away?

- 5 year warranty on glass lined tank with heat exchanger
- Heat exchanger; all copper-double walled with positive leak detection
- Polyurathane foam insulation provides greater insulation values than most competitive models
- Exclusive porcelain formula (glass lining) fused to the solid steel at 1600 degrees assures best tank liner on the market
- Energy efficient - meeting energy efficiency requirements

Tests show over 28% savings on your compressor run time. The heat exchanger not only provides free hot water, but also allows your compressor to run more efficiently.

For instance, if a 5 HP compressor runs 6 hours a day, 30 kilowatt hours a day can be saved. In monthly savings, this can range from 40 to 80 dollars, depending on your cost per kilowatt.

IMPCO president reaffirms promotion needs

LANCASTER — Although people tend to think of 65 as retirement age, Inter-State "continues to move ahead at a dynamic pace," according to President Robert B. McSparran at Inter-State Milk Producers' Cooperative's 65th annual meeting, Thursday.

While the year of 1982 was one of uncertainty for dairy farmers as increases in milk production dampened the prospects that prices would keep pace with inflation, Inter-State worked diligently to move excess milk off the market at a minimal cost to producers, McSparran said.

To achieve this, during 1982 Inter-State took steps to work more closely with its neighboring cooperatives, including Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers, Eastern Milk Producers, Atlantic Processing, Inc. and Dairymen, Inc., he said. During the past year, Pennmarva Dairymen's Federation has continued as a strong and effective voice for the five major dairy cooperative in Federal Order 4, he added.

Holly Milk Cooperative, an Inter-State owned butter/powder processing plant, has also played a vital role in balancing milk supplies, he said, adding that the increased efficiency of the milk plant in the past year exemplifies the dynamic pace to which the 65-year-old cooperative has committed itself to better market it members' milk.

McSparran emphasized that "with supply and demand remaining out of balance, the need for dairy product advertising and promotion has never been greater than it is today."

He also expressed disappointment at the defeat of the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Referendum, and encouraged support for the current "Real Seal" promotion of the American Dairy Association.

"Today our industry is being decimated by imitations and imports," McSparran said. "It is imperative that we continue to advertise, educate and research new products to regain some of the market we have lost — and to keep from losing any more of our market."

Boyer receives PFA's "Distinguished Service" award

HERSHEY — The Pennsylvania Farmers' Association presented their "Distinguished Service to Agriculture" award to dairyman and community leader, Kenneth H. Boyer of R3, Selinsgrove.

The presentation was made Tuesday evening during PFA's 32nd Annual Meeting.

During his 73 years, Boyer has accomplished an outstanding record of leadership in agriculture and community service. He was executive director of the Pennsylvania Agricultural Conservation and Stabilization Service from 1969 to 1977. Boyer was also a PFA state board director from 1966 to 1969, helped organize the First Pennsylvania Artificual Breeding Co-op, was a leader in the Northeastern Farm Credit Service, the Pennsylvania Holstein Association, the Pennsylvania Dairy Herd Improvement Association and numerous other farm organizations.

Boyer holds a bachelor's degree in agricultural education from Penn State and taught vocational agriculture for seven years before purchasing the family farm in 1942. While becoming a full-time farmer, he continued his interest in education.

Boyer is a past State Advisor to the Pennsylvania Association of Future Farmers of America. He also organized and supervised an "on the farm" training program for returning veterans of World War II and the Korean War. He has served on the board of directors of the Selinsgrove Area Joint School and was a member of the Susquehanna Valley Boy Scout Council.

Boyer continues to operate a modern 140-cow registered Holstein dairy farm in Snyder County in partnership with his stepson, Charles Benner. The farm, encompassing 302 acres and renting an additional 174 acres employs up-to-date techniques and equipment and has received awards for outstanding conservation practices.

In addition to honoring Boyer, PFA county associations were cited for outstanding achievements in PFA program areas. Dauphin County Farmers' Association led by Bruce Corsnitz of R3 Halifax, received the "All-Star" award for excellence in all seven program areas: membership gain, advisory councils, women's activities, public affairs, business services, information and public relations, and agricultural marketing activities.

Receiving "Star" awards in six program areas were York, Clearfield and Union county farmers' associations. Berks, Adams, Crawford, Erie and Centre counties were each presented five "Star" awards.

Four "Star" awards were presented to leaders from Chester/Delaware, Franklin, Mercer, Lycoming, Northumberland, and Bradford/Sullivan county farmers' associations.

Receiving three "Star" awards for excellence in PFA programs were: Mifflin, Perry, Snyder, Armstrong, Beaver/Lawrence, McKean/Potter, Tioga/Potter, Luzerne, Schuylkill/Carbon and Wayne county farmers' associations.

Receiving two "Star" awards were Bucks, Lehigh, Cumberland, Fulton, Juniata, Westmoreland, Butler, Clinton, Montour, and Northampton/Monroe counties. Lancaster, Lebanon, Montgomery, Huntingdon, Bedford, Cambria, Fayette, Indiana, Somerset, Washington, Columbia, Susquehanna and Wyoming/Lackawanna counties each received a single "Star" award.

Dauphin County Farmers' Assn. received PFA's "All Star" designation for 1982. On hand to accept the prestigious award were: from left, Cheryl Oellig, newsletter editor and membership chairman; Arthur Brandt, director; Samuel Demey, treasurer; Harry Ulrich, legislative committee; Ron Kopp, president; Ron Oellig, membership chairman; Eugene Feidt, director; John Tallman, director; Eugene Eisenbise, director; and Sara Markel, county women's committee chairman.

PFA

and Congress make strong movement toward a balanced budget through budget cutbacks, not new taxation.

"Farmers don't want artificial prosperity built on government dollars. There's not a whole lot of security in hanging onto Uncle Sam's money rope. What we really need is a solid economic foundation. There's only one place where we can find that foundation. That's in the market place!"

"I'm not suggesting government farm programs don't have a place. But I am saying these programs should be designed to allow the market place to function as freely as possible."

"It's a fact that farmers have been helped most by expanded markets. Sales abroad have resulted in higher net income for farmers. The same holds true for the markets free from government interference on the domestic front."

"As we move government out of agriculture we need to be ready with a marketing system that benefits the farmers. This is not to say that PFA and the American Farm Bureau Federation will be the only mechanism but we should be playing a major role in discovering that mechanism and designing or re-designing if for farmer use."

"Production without marketing is a thing of the past," said Eckel. Yes, we have a production surplus at the moment in the dairy industry, but the long-range problem which needs our attention is marketing of dairy products. That's the biggest problem facing agriculture today. We need to spend more time and money to develop markets and a marketing system for our products."

In response to the current dairy situation, voting delegates at the 32nd Annual Meeting of the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association adopted policy calling for a national plan to curb milk production in the wake of record-high government dairy product stockpiles.

Delegates recommended that a nationwide plan be developed which would provide incentives for dairy producers who cut back on their herd's production and would penalize those who continue to overproduce. Delegates also recommended that the 50 cents per cwt. milk price deduction, scheduled to start Dec. 1, be delayed to give dairy farmers additional time to develop viable alternate solutions to the surplus problem.

In addition, delegates recommended that surplus government stockpiles he distributed to the needy. To increase sales of dairy and other farm commodities, PFA leaders recommended that all foreign markets be explored and that a nationwide research, advertising and promotional program for milk be established. PFA recommended that the program be financed by a 10 cent per cwt. assessment on milk.

In other action, delegates recommended that farmers not be forced to absorb the entire cost of reduced foreign or domestic commodity sales due to embargoes or trade barriers. Delegates also recommended that farmers become first line creditors in any bankruptcy—action concerning farm commodities.

During elections, voting delegates filled eight vacancies on PFA's state board of directors. Two new directors, Richard Solly of Ivyland, Bucks County and Timothy Piwowar of Uniontown, Fayette County were elected to two-year terms. Solly will represent Northampton, Monroe, Lehigh and Bucks county associations (District 2). Piwowar will represent members in Westmoreland, Greene, Washington and Fayette counties (District 16).

State directors re-elected and counties they represent are: Christian Wolff of R2, Millville - (District 4) Columbia, Luzerne, Carbon and Schuylkill; Richard Barto of R1, Montgomery - (District 6) Centre, Clinton and Lycoming; Mrs. Carolyn Rutter of Dover - (District 8) Lebanon, Lancaster, York and Dauphin; Kenneth Loht of R2, McClure - (District 10) Huntingdon, Mifflin, Perry and Juniata; Theodore Hoover of R1, Patton - (District 12) Clearfield, Indiana, and Cambria; and Jack Waddell of Meadville - (District 14) Crawford, Warren and Erie.

PFA president Eckel appointed four new members and returned four others to two-year terms on PFA's State Women's Committee. Ag legislation moves in lame duck session

BY SHEILA MILLER

HARRISBURG — Back from their election recess, legislators in Harrisburg acted on several pieces of agricultural legislation this week.

On the House side of the aisle, the Agriculture Committee acted on House Bill 2535, the "Dog Law" on Tuesday. After several amendments, the bill was voted out of committee.

According to vice chairman Noah Wenger, the amended dog law will increase the maximum indemnity paid to farmers for livestock killed by dogs to $10,000 per animal, not to exceed 90 percent of its appraised value. This is up from the previous limit of $5,000 per farmer.

Another change in the law provides for a reserve fund of $100,000 to be maintained by the Department of Agriculture for indemnity payments. Up until now, the secretary could distribute the funds to counties that assumed enforcement duties without maintaining a reserve fund.

Concerning the effect the amended dog law might have on the operation of puppy mills within the state, Wenger commented that "with the additional funds, the Department will be able to do inspection and enforcement more effectively. This will result in better quality breeding setups."

The additional funds will come from an increase in dog license fees — $5 for breeding animals; $3 for spayed or neutered animals. HB 2535, as amended, also would provide for senior citizens to receive their dog licenses for half price.

One clarification of the dog law which was of concern to many farm groups was the designation of who would be authorized to inspect kennel operations. The amended version of the bill makes it clear that only the state dog warden or employees of the Department of Agriculture will be authorized to make inspections of facilities — not humane league officers. However, these groups may still have access to records of dogs coming into and leaving the facility.

The Senate Agriculture Committee also met this week and worked on two bills — HB 2167, the "co-op dividend" bill, and HB 1459, the "abandoned animals" bill.

The co-op dividend bill, which would raise the current legislative limit of eight percent annum on cooperative dividends to "not in excess of two points below the average 26-week treasury bill rate for the twelve months preceding the dividend declaration date" in order to provide the incentive for investment in cooperatives, was tabled.

According to committee chairman Sen. Edward Helfrick's office, the bill "no longer has application for current prevailing conditions. When it was first introduced, interests rates were higher, but now they've dropped to the point where eight percent is in line."

HB 1459 was reported out of the Senate Ag Committee. This bill "shortens the period which a humane league or shelter must keep and maintain an abandoned animal before it is disposed of. The transfer of an animal to a league or shelter could only take place after the animal had been abandoned for 10 days or more and only after notification to the owner of the intended transfer by registered mail. A veterinarian would be absolved of liability if proper notification procedures have been followed."

Currently, humane leagues and shelters must house and feed abandoned animals for thirty days. This would be reduced to "a more reasonable" 48 hours which would lessen the burden borne by humane leagues and shelters under current statute.

The bill provides for the owner of the animal to be liable for the cost of boarding for the minimum 10 days plus 48 hours, for a total of 12 days.

The bill defines "abandonment" as forsake entirely, neglect, or refuse to provide or perform legal obligations of care and support.

This bill is supported by the Pa. Veterinary Medicine Assn. and is "endorsed and approved of" by the president of the Federated Humane Societies of Pennsylvania.

York Sheep & Wool Producers seek queen

YORK — York County Sheep and Wool Producers will discuss "The Pre-Lambing Ewe" during their Nov. 15 meeting at the county 4-H center. Included in the program, which begins at 7 p.m., will be demonstrations and discussions of management technique.

Wool producers plan to sponsor a county sheep and wool queen for 1983, and invite interested young women who qualify to enter their pageant program. Crowning of the new queen will highlight the group's annual banquet on Jan. 22 at Blymire's Church Hall near Dallastown.

To be eligible for the queen competition, young women must be between the ages of 14 and 23 and live on a farm that raises sheep. Applicants will be interviewed by a selection committee. Interested young women are invited to contact Sue Dutrey by calling 717-244-7307.

Several other upcoming events of interest to sheep and wool growers have been scheduled by the commodity group. A Dec. 15 general meeting at the 4-H center will feature a panel discussion on "lamb survival," and the proper use of colostrum, stomach tubes, docking, vaccinating, heat lamps and other management aids.

In the planning stage for next year is a directory listing of where sheep can be purchased in York County.

Wool producers interested in membership and activities of the county organization are invited to contact secretary Martha Lau at 717-428-1162, or county Extension livestock specialist Tony Dobrosky at 717-757-9657.

He said guidelines for feeding TMR properly include making sure you know how fast the silo unloads and how much grain is being put in. It also is important to have a good idea of how much cows will eat, since that varies from one herd to another. Roughage intake should be maximized, with 21 pound per day as a minimum. Frequency of feeding will increase this intake, he noted.

Groups can be made up according to their days in milk and their average production, Hubbard said. Graphing cows on a dairy production chart will help in observing their production throughout a lacatation.

Groups must be managed carefully, because Hubbard pointed out that when a cow is changed to a new group her production will drop because of the social pressure. Prewitt noted that changes between groups will not be as drastic if the nutrient change between groups is not wide.

When asked how to feed the 100-pound cow, Prewitt responded that it is important to give a ration, totally balanced in everything, because she won't eat enough feed, "Knowing how to feed those cows represents the future," he remarked.

Asked whether the time and extra equipment is worth it to feed TMR, Prewitt said it was a decision to be worked out between the dairyman and the accountant. "Every situation is different."

have fit the man as well as the co-op.

"We have, at Inter-State, listened to different drummers and stepped to their music," Honan said.

The Moorestown, N.J. resident challenged the group and incoming General Manager Hand to lead, plan action and not be afraid to change.

"Of all things that are constant," Honan offered, "I think change is the most constant."

And the co-op has recorded constant changes since its 1917 origin at a time when milk was shipped by trolley or rail to Philadelphia, Honan said.

"There was no guaranteed market, no guaranteed price and no guaranteed payments," he added.

Many of the changes included the formation of the Philadelphia Dairy Council in 1919 which helped establish milk sanitation regulations for members. The quality standards served as the templet for standards adopted by the Pennsylvania Department of Health in the early 1930s.

While Inter-State initiated its own inspection program in the 1960s, the Dairy Council concentrated on consumer nutrition education.

During the Honan years from 1963-82, his term as general manager, the co-op founded Quality Control Labs, a commercial independent testing laboratory and a wholly-owned subsidiary of Inter-State.

As the winds of change continued to blow, Inter-State members found themselves the sole owners of the Holly Milk Cooperative plant.

The purchase added to the co-op's assets. According to Inter-State treasurer Robert Dever, the co-op achieved its highest income, its greatest asset value and largest net worth in 1982.

Dever explained that in its 65th year, Inter-State expanded sales by more than 30 percent, reaching $402 million.

The balance sheet, said Dever, shows more than $43 million in assets, composed of the value of patron milk and the value of property, plant and equipment.

"These assets are greater than ever before because Inter-State handled more milk than ever before — 6.7 percent more, or 2.439 billion pounds," Dever reported.

He noted the contribution of the capital retention program which began December 1981 added $1.8 million to Inter-State's income statement and member equity account.

James Fraher, assistant economist echoed the financial optimism through Inter-State's marketing track record.

"This past year, Inter-State marketed increased quantities of milk in the face of declining Class I sales," Fraher said. "Marketing milk in this environment underlined the importance of Inter-State's long-term relationships with our regular and spot buyers of both Class I and Class II milk," he said.

During the past year, market conditions were similar to those at Inter-State throughout the United States as a whole, Fraher noted. Resulting surplus conditions produced annual federal expeditures of $2 billion for purchases of surplus butter, powder and cheese.

Fraher explained the co-op's position on expanding the Federal Order 4 marketing area.

The expansion, said Fraher, would eliminate unfair advantages enjoyed by milk dealers operating in northeast Pennsylvania and would add a significant volume of Class I sales to the Order 4 pool, helping to reverse continuing losses of Order 4 Class I sales to unregulated dealers in the region.

The economist forecast a decline in milk production due to reduced milk price. Declining production and steady sales will stablilize and eventually strengthen milk prices, he said.

As the co-op enters it's 66th year, Fraher added, "Our job for the next year is to insure that Inter-State emerges from this period of market adjustment and change with an increased ability to do its job of guaranteeing members a market for their milk at the best possible price."—DT

Blended credit sells grain to Phillipines

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The U.S. Department of Agriculture has approved $40 million worth of blended credit for the sale of U.S. wheat, corn and soybean meal to the Philippines, Secretary of Agriculture John R. Block has announced.

He said the credit will generate the sale of 150,000 tons more of U.S. wheat and corn than had been projected to the Philippines for the marketing year.

"Perhaps more important, at least for the longer term, is the fact that the blended credit will give us entry into the new and growing Philippines soybean meal market, which has been supplied almost entirely by Brazil," Block said, citing the 50,000 tons of soybean meal in the credit package.

Under the program, interest-free direct government credits are blended with government-guaranteed private credit to produce a lower interest rate.

The Philippines credit package of $8 million direct and $32 million guaranteed credit was approved for the sale of 100,000 tons of wheat, 50,000 tons of corn and 50,000 tons of soybean meal.

As a result, he said, Philippines wheat imports, all from the United States, will rise from the 850,000 tons expected earlier to 950,000 tons; total corn imports will reaCH 300,000 tons, with the U.S. share rising from 158,000 tons to 208,000, and soybean meal imports will increase to 250,000 tons, with the U.S. share going from zero to 50,000 tons.

The program authorizes blended credit of $1.5 billion over a period of three years, with $100 million of direct credit and $400 million in credit guarantees authorized for the first year.

The Philippines credit package is the foruth to be approved since the program was announced Oct. 20. It brings the total of blended credit approved for this year to $350 million, comprised of $70 million in direct credits and $280 million in credit guarantees.

Dorathy Fry, retiring 4-H leader, looks over some of the dozens of books which she offered as trick or treat gifts to neighborhood youngsters. A school librarian, she feels every child needs books of his own.

Retiring 4-H leader remembers 40 years of rewards

BY SALLY BAIR
Staff Correspondent

Dorathy Fry remembers when most 4-H'ers had corn projects and boys never took home economics' projects. She remembers when there was a 4-H Posture Queen contest and when round-up was held in Millersville.

She also remembers, vividly, when she went to Penn State and won first place in the 4-H sewing competition. It was this event that may be responsible for Dorathy's serving 40 years as a 4-H leader.

Dorathy Fry, Hopeland Drive, Denver, remembers the 40 years fondly, and firmly supports the advantages of the program.

"It is one youth program which combines fun, knowledge and learning skills." She feels winning ribbons is important, noting, "Ribbons are a tangible thing and kids treasure the ribbons they win."

She has witnessed many changes in the program over the years, and in the youngsters. One negative change, for both the program and the kids, is the rushed life that most people seem to have. "I think the kids are overprogrammed and we are robbing them of their childhood to have every minute filled. You cannot expect kids to do their best when they are so rushed."

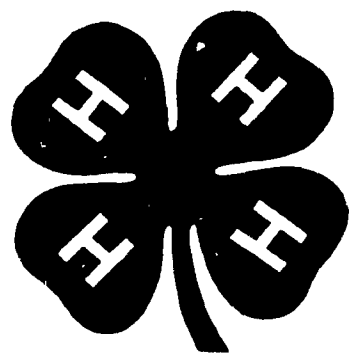
She feels the trend toward community clubs is a "mistake." She notes, "I always organized to meet the deadline imposed by the extension office, but I concentrated on a summer program. We met six times, every two weeks. You cannot have a successful program when their interest is divided. You also have to be adjustable. I may skip a week or two if many of the kids are on vacation."

She notices a difference in the 4-H'ers attitudes, too. "In the '50', they knocked themselves out. They would always better themselves a little. That has fallen by the wayside. There is too much to think about and they do things at the last minute,"

Dorathy says she was a 4-H'er herself in the 1927 and it was in 1931 that she won the highest honor in the state, "quite surprisingly," according to her. Going to Penn State then was "the highest honor the county could bestow. It doesn't seem to mean as much to the kids or to the parents now."

She recalls that in 1941 Mr. Sloat and Mr. Smith, Extension agents, came looking for a leader. "In 1942, through Mr. Smith's tutelage, the Lincoln Community Center came to be a reality. It used to be mostly corn projects and girls took agriculture but boys didn't take home economics. I was a leader for garden projects and coached several 4-H plays. The club snowballed. I found it interesting and we had good sturdy clubs. I like to cater to kids who don't have much else."

Eventually Dorathy left the community club and began a cooking club in her own home, known first as the Jolly Caterers and later as the Better Bakers. She says, "I always would have more children than I could handle. We used our patio (some distance from the house and under roof) in conjunction with my kitchen."



In her last year there were 14 members, and she figures that if she checked her registration sheets, which she has from every year, she may have taken over 1,000 4-H'ers under her wing.

There are few cooking projects she hasn't taught, but through them all she had strong feelings about things to be taught along with the skills of the project. "I don't want children to go out and buy things. I encourage them to use scraps when making something. You have to teach children they are not underprivileged if they can't go out and buy something.

"I also taught them that we eat everything we cook and they must taste everything we make. Of course, they watered the flowers with the molasses milk or took a bite and had to go outside," she laughs.

"I thought it was important to teach them down-to-earth information. In a short time we taught a unit and certain skills. Today we have people who don't know how to peel potatoes. I teach them to be thrifty, and not to use as many packages and tin cans.

I also teach them to plan a meal and make it well balanced and have it ready to serve all at once."

She laughs as she recalls some of their cooking adventures. When they made waffels, she says. "As long as I had milk and eggs and flour, they kept mixing up the batter and eating them until they almost split. I taught them to make cream puffs and they couldn't believe how easy it is. They were licking their dishes."

Dorathy recalls a project called "stepping out," which taught 4-H'ers some of the social graces. She says, "They really bestirred themselves to think of original games. I taught them how to feel confident and how to make introductions."

Dorathy was instrumental in starting the 4-H Posture Queen contest in 1954 because "as I told another leader' all the kids are so slouchy they all look so handdog,' "

That was a time when beauty queen contests were in their heyday, so they based the contest on poise, appearance and the ability to answer some questions. This evolved into the 4-H Queen Contest, but Dorathy suggests, "It became so unnecesssary they should have dumped it years ago." Now is has become the Outstanding Boy and Girl Award, something Dorathy concludes is "much better. You must keep your standards high."

Each year Dorathy gave membership pins to every member as something tangible to treasure from their experience.

Dorathy also helped get a leaders organization together years ago to share ideas and frustrations. It went strong for a while and then faltered. The idea, however, is now being revived in the form of the 4-H Leaders Advisory Council.

Dorathy was a natural 4-H leader because, while she and her husband Harold have no children of their own, she is a former elementary school teacher and is currently a school librarian. Her fondness for children and caring about their well-being is very evident. "I really wish more people who have no children would get interested in 4-H They are more objective and they would find it rewarding. Especially older people - it would give them something to think about and look forward to."

She and Harold have participated in several 4-H exchange trips, first going with County Council, and later organizing them herself. They have exchanged with New York, Oklahoma, Dorathy picks some of the mint growing alongside the patio which she used as a meeting and work place for her 4-Hers. Although retiring after 40 years as a 4-H leader Dorathy will keep active caring for her garden and doing what she likes most — reading!

Roosters have become a favorite hobby of Dorathy Fry's, and her living room is filled with them, in every shape and size. Here she holds one of her favorites and in the background are the shelves lined with more of the little critters.

Retiring 4-H leader remembers

Massachusetts and Illnois, several times. "I loved them. We made lasting friendships," Dorathy says. Once she financed a trip completely on her own by doing public speaking. Despite the fact that she made no charge, relying only on donations, she earned all the necessary money.

Dorathy continues her public speaking, going out about six times monthly. She tells stories, gives book reviews, or talks about bibliotherapy. Bibliotherapy is reading books about people who have dealt with a problem similar to yours and learning how they solved it. About her speaking engagements she says, "I get a kick out of it. People who don't take the time to read are surprised by what you find in books."

Dorathy has known for a long time what you can find in books, and never tires of sharing her love of books with others. Perhaps it was no accident that she enjoys books so much because she has found that the unusual spelling of her name reflects a heroine of a book her mother was reading.

She began as an elementary teacher on a two-year certificate from Millersville. She graduated in 1933, then got her B.S. in elementary library in 1961-62. In 1967 she got her Master's degree from Drexel University.

She is now working as a librarian two days a week at Our Lady of Perpetual Help School, meeting children on Thursday and "working" on Fridays. Her students like to joke that theirs is the only school that has two "Frydays."

This week, Nov. 15-19, is Children's Book Week, with the theme "Get Lost in a Book." Dorathy has strong feelings about reading and young children. "I think children should be read to every day. You always have time for something you love and you find time for reading." She thinks you can instill a love of reading in children not just be reading to them but by enjoying reading yourself.

She feels children should have books of their own, adding. "They should have a place to put them. Some books are meant to be kept - even for the children's children. I lost some of my childhood books in a fire and I miss them.

"You should buy a nicely illustrated edition, with good paper and good print. Your child will learn to love books and appreciated them," she says.

Surprisingly, she mentions that some movies on television have a way of bringing children back to books. The Wizard of Oz, Pinocchio and even E.T. are examples. But she adds, "It's an uphill fight to get them to read new things. They are not adventuresome."

Dorathy's love of books dates back a long time. She says, "My fondest dream as a child was to have more books than I could ever read. I have now reached that goal."

She hastens to add, "You can never have too many books." She helps her neighborhood children acquire books by giving them as Trick or Treat gifts. "I've given books for about 20 years. Parents bring their children and it's like old home week."

Asked what she does in her spare time, she states without hesitation. "Read, read, read." She also enoys crotcheting and she has a rooster collection which numbers in the hundreds. The collection began after a fire destroyed their home in 1945. A friend gave her $10 and told her to purchase something frivolous. She recalls buying a ceramic rooster and chicken which was on special at Hess's of Allentown. They sat on the top shelf then and continue to dominate the collection which has expanded greatly.

She also collects Beatrix Potter figurines.

Dorathy is a member of the Pennsylvania School Librarians Associations and the Catholic Librarians Association. A former member of Farm Women 3, she dropped her membership when other activities became more numerous.

She enjoys canning and freezing, saying, "I have a little itty bitty, garden, but people say 'you are too old to garden. Do you want this?' I take it."

Dorathy was secretary of the 4-H Development Fund in Lancaster County for 10 years and served on the Board for 20 years.

Asked why she decided to retire now, she says, "I have a cane, and the distance from the patio to the house is getting longer - and longer." She says she is hoping someone else in the neighborhood will become a leader and continue with the club, and that she will be a willing advisor.

Recalling her 4-H youngsters, Dorathy says, "I had a lot of industrious 4-H'ers," ticking off the names of teachers, nurses, bankers, a borough manager, someone at NASA and someone in the intelligence service. "I can't pick out one as being more outstanding than another." She has had children and grandchildren of former 4-H'ers, and they still call her, often asking for specific recipes they learned to make under Dorathy.

Reflecting on what it takes to be a 4-H leader, Dorathy says, "Patience, a sense of humor and if something fails you can't give up but have to try from another angle."

Dorathy has these traits in abundance, plus a love of children, and her leadership will be missed in the 4-H program.

Nissley wines win in nat'l competition

BAINBRIDGE — Nissley Vineyards of Bainbridge, Lancaster Co. has won four more medals to add to their collection following the Wineries Unlimited Eastern Wine Competition 1982 held in Ithaca, NY last month.

Each year, wineries located east of the Rocky Mountains enter wines to be judged by wine experts from all over the United States. In the three-day session, wines are swirled, sipped and analyzed for what the competition entry form termed" ...those nuances and complexities of taste and aroma which make the superior wine more interesting."

Accordingly, Nissley Vineyards' Holiday Rose was among 51 wines receiving a silver medal out of 735 wines entered in the contest. In other categories, Aurora 1981, Bainbridge White 1981, and Bainbridge Red 1980 each received a bronze medal.

"We are very pleased to be among the top 20 wineries to receive four or more awards," said owner and winemaker J. Richard Nissley. "Out of 107 wineries which entered the competition, 31 won no awards at all. Moreover, Nissley Vineyards is the only winery located in Lancaster County to be included on the list of medal winners."

The Nissley family is currently busy fermenting the 1982 harvest of grapes. Although it is too soon to tell how the resulting wines will fare in future competitions, there is reasons to expect good results.

The 1982 growing season turned out to be an excellent one for grapes at Nissley Vineyards, with many sunny days for ripening the fruit and very few pest problems. With a higher than average yield this year, the Nissleys are producing close to 50,000 gallons of wine — quite a jump from last year's production of 27,000.

"We had to quickly purchase more tanks to hold the juice," reported Nissley, "which means the winery is full to capacity."

Despite the reduced area for walk-ways, the family continues to provide guided tours of the winemaking facilities as they have done since 1978. Visitors also are encouraged to sample the wines at a tasting bar made from cherry planks placed on 120-gallon barrels in front of a large stone fireplace.

More than 20 different wines are available at the winery which is situated mid-way in the Lancaster-York-Harrisburg triangle. Additionally, as a result of legislation passed last fall, the Nissleys have set up three shops away from the winery — one at the Colonial Park Plaza at Harrisburg; one on Bern Road in Wyomissing Hills; and another at Ontelaunee Farm Market near Leesport.

The unique aspect of the wine shops is that PLCB regulations permit the customer to sample the wines. The Nissleys anticipate that their award-winning wines will be available for sampling at all locations, as long as supplies last.

Name 3 people you know who don't like cheese

Hard to do isn't it? Now if the choice was spinach, yogurt, or even something as tasty as lamb, you probably could answer the question.

It's hard to name three people who don't like cheese because there are so many tastes in the cheese world alone. But, whether it's mild or sharp, yellow or white, cheese, in one form or another, seems to please.

According to the United Dairy Association, cheese as a food is almost as old as milk, from which it's made. It dates to about 4000 B.C. in a story familiar to many about the shepherd who carried milk in a pouch from a sheep's stomach.

And then, as now, people recognize the delicious taste of cheese.

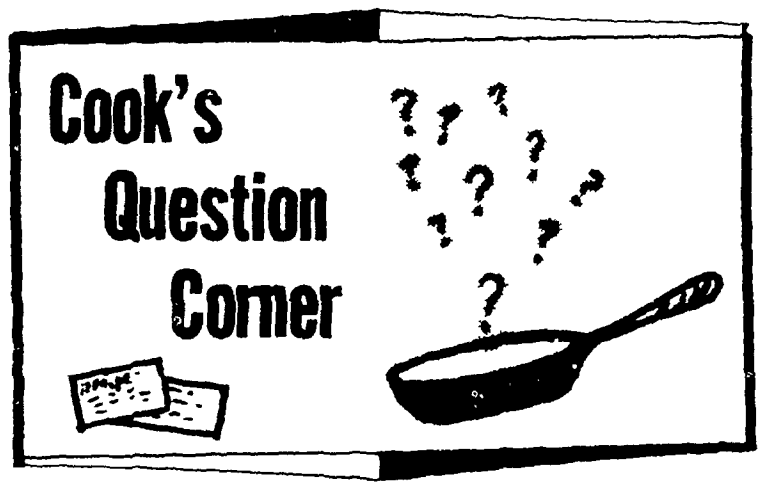
HAM-MACARONI CASSEROLE
2 c. cooked elbow macaroni
2 1/2 c. cubed baked ham
1 can sliced mushrooms, drained
1/4 c. sliced pimiento stuffed olives
1/2 c. chopped onion
1 1/2 c. dairy sour cream
2 T. prepared mustard
1 to 2 t. caraway seed
1 t. Worcestershire sauce
1/8 t. pepper
1/4 c. shredded Cheddar cheese

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Combine macaroni, ham, mushrooms, olives and onions in a large mixing bowl. Combine sour cream, mustard, caraway seed, Worcestershire sauce and pepper in a small bowl; pour mixture over ham and blend thoroughly. Pour into 2-quart casserole. Bake 30 to 35 minutes. Remove from oven and sprinkle with cheese. Bake just until cheese is melted, about 3 minutes. Serve immediately.

CHEESE SAUCE
2 T. butter
2 T. flour
2 c. milk
1/2 c. grated cheese
1/2 t. Worcestershire sauce
1/2 t. salt

Melt butter. Add flour and stir constantly. While stirring, slowly add milk. Heat and stir till mixture thickens and boils. Add remaining ingredients and stir till dissolved. Delicious served over green vegetables or potatoes.

What's macaroni without cheese? Not much. Those tubes of pasta with their firm-to-the-tooth texture need the creaminess that naturally melting cheese provides, and its flavor too. When you're looking for an easy casserole, macaroni and cheese fit the ticket. Try it.



ANSWER - For Mrs. Janas King of Dover, Del. who was seeking a recipe for homemade ham and bean soup, comes the following answer:

BEAN SOUP

Use 1 pound ground ham and 3 cups of beans. Cook all together until done. It makes about five quarts. I use crackers with mine.

Grace Ikeler
Bloomsburg, Pa.

QUESTION - Does anyone have a recipe for mince pie that uses green tomatoes?

Mrs. Charles W. Fry
Beavertown, Pa.

QUESTION - We have received several recipes from readers who would like to know what size a "regular bottle of molasses" is. It appeared in a recently published recipe called 'Molasses Spice Cookies.' We received this recipe from Cynthia Druck of Red Lion. Perhaps Cynthia could answer this question for us. If not, has anybody tried this recipe and what amount of molasses have you used?

Bring to boiling, stirring constantly. Boil and stir 1 minute. Stir in Cheddar cheese until melted. Pour sauce over onions and bacon. Sprinkle with Parmesan cheese. TYPES OF THANKSGIVING TURKEY AVAILABLE

You will have many forms of turkey to choose from when you go to buy your Thanksgiving bird this year.

The most popular form again this year will be the ever-traditional whole turkey, roasted for hours to a golden-brown and served with all the fixings. You can buy whole turkey either fresh or frozen. You usually pay a premium price for a fresh turkey. However, in most cases, a frozen turkey is fresher than an unfrozen bird because it is preserved in its fresh state shortly after slaughter. A fresh turkey can be held up to one week after slaughter.

A new twist to the whole turkey has appeared in the past few years. You can buy your Thanksgiving turkey frozen with a seasoned stuffing already in the body cavity. The stuffing is prepared under sanitary conditions and is ideal for those who do not have a favorite recipe. You roast a prestuffed turkey in its frozen state with little advance preparation.

Another exciting concept is the self-basting turkey. An oil-type product, such as corn oil, margarine or butter, is added to the turkey meat to add succulence and greater flavor. In the self-basting process, the mixture bastes with the meat and skin surface, leaving you free to enjoy your guests while the turkey bastes itself to a golden brown.

If you prefer just breast or dark meat, or want additional meat to go along with the whole bird, turkeys are sold in parts in the fresh as well as in the frozen meat case. Because of the added labor costs and meat content, turkey parts cost a little more than whole turkeys.

There are a variety of turkey products available that involve little or no waste and are ideal for a small family. The boned and tied turkey consists of light and dark meat surrounded by a natural skin cover. The advantages of this type of turkey are a shorter cooking time and no bones or trimmable waste. Because of the labor involved in separating the meat from the bone and the processing necessary to put the product into its final form, boned and tied turkeys also cost more than whole turkeys.

Another no-bones-or-waste product is the turkey pan roast. The meat portion consists of a light and dark meat portion which has been mixed with binding materials and formed in an aluminum pan with a natural skin covering placed on top.

Still another type of boneless turkey meat product is processed in a pear-shaped ham-type can which can be roasted with little advance preparation.

The frozen turkey and gravy concept is also ideal for a Thanksgiving meal if there are just one or two persons. Slices of turkey are placed in aluminum pans and covered with gravy. All you need to do is reheat according to the directions in the package.

There are a variety of forms of turkey to choose from for your Thanksgiving dinner. Select one that is just right for you, your family and friends.

TIPS ON BUYING CIDER

Harvest time in the fall also means it's apple cider time. Until about 1930 apple cider was made and consumed in greated quantities than any other fruit juice.

Today there are different methods of preservation used to keep cider so you can enjoy it over a longer period of time.

Some cider is sold fresh, just as it comes from the press. This kind will keep about 7 to 10 days if refrigerated. Some cider has a preservative added such as sodium or potassium sorbate to increase its keeping qualities. You'll also see pasteurized cider that is sold in sealed, sterilized containers.

Reading the label on cider containers is your best guide to knowing which type you are buying so you can choose the type of cider you like best.

Pa. youth receives Jersey scholarship

COLUMBUS, Ohio — William S. Terrel, son of Stuart and Lois Terrel of Waymart, Pa., has been named recipient of the Paul Jackson Memorial Scholarship, presented annually by the American Jersey Cattle Club.

Terrel is now a sophomore majoring in agribusiness at Williamsport Area Community College, Williamsport. As a six-year member of both 4-H and FFA, he amassed a remarkable record of achievement with Jersey projects.

Terrell was named Star Greenhand of the local FFA chapter in 1978 and Star Chapter Farmer in 1979 and 1980. In January, 1981, he received the Keystone Farmer Degree, the highest honor an FFA member can receive on the state level. He also served as a member of the Wayne County 4-H Council.

The Terrels operate a 204-acre farm with 110 Jerseys. Williams plans to return to the family farm and continue a 52-year tradition of shipping Jersey milk. Plans are underway to enlarge the facilities at the farm.

Prepare before dialing doctor

LANCASTER — If you or a member of your family is seriously sick, a telephone call to the doctor's office may be the fastest way to get accurate advice. But before you dial, take a minute to think about what the doctor will need to know.

Charles Crawford, Extension health education specialist at Penn State University, says it is a good idea to be prepared to report:

— All of the sick person's symptoms, such as loss of appetite, fever, aches and paints, vomiting, diarrhea and dizziness;

— How long the symptoms have lasted;

— Whether the symptoms come and go or are present all the time.

Knowing what to report helps the doctor or nurse decide if the person should be examined. If an office visit is not needed, your time and money will be saved. And, the doctor may be able to give advice on how to care for the sick person at home if given enough information.

It is a good idea to write down what you want to say before you call the doctor. Have paper and pencil ready to write down any advice the doctor or nurse may give you. Be as calm as possible and talk slowly.

Finally, make your call brief but be sure to describe as much as you can about the sick person's condition.

Kids, get involved with livestock

LANCASTER — Kids, if you had opportunity to visit the Keystone International Livestock Exposition in Harrisburg this week, you probably saw a lot of animals that look somewhat like those on this page for you to color.

Livestock provides us with nutritious meat, which in turn helps keep us strong and healthy with essential protein, vitamins, and minerals.

Beef cattle, sheep and pigs also give us leather for shoes and clothing, wool for warm sweaters and blankets, medicines to keep us healthy, plus much more!

After you've colored the picture, masterfully drawn by an artist who just happens to be employed in the field of livestock, then try the essay contest and win a prize for your school.

You can win a visit from livestock animals, much like those you've colored, to your school this spring.

To enter the contest, you must send a 75 to 100 word essay on livestock and why you want them to visit your school.

Mail your essay by December 1 to: Pa. Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Markets, 2301 N. Cameron Street, Harrisburg, Pa. 17110.

Make sure to include your name, address, phone number and your school's name.

These beef cattle are from the Beef and Sheep Center from Penn State University in Centre County. If you visited KILE this week at the Farm Show Complex in Harrisburg, you saw a lot of animals just like these being judged for quality. If you'd like to have an animal like this visit your school, read how on this page.

On being a farm wife -And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

What do you mean it looks like I'm hanging upside down in the manure gutter? Of course it looks like I'm hanging upside down in the manure gutter.

I AM hanging upside down in the manure gutter!

Yes, it would be fair to question why I'm sprawled here on my stomach, across the center alley of the dairy barn, with my head and arms extended down into the gutter.

Let's just back up a bit.

I had just finished washing and drying Bess' udder, when I stood up, and accidentally bumped my right eye, somehow, with my hand. Immediately the vision in that eye blurred.

My contact lens was gone. Not slipped to the side. Not on the eyelash. Gone.

We stand to milk on steel grates that cover the manure gutter. Manure, sawdust, bits of hay, anything else that fits through the inch-and-half gaps between the steel slats drops right on through to the gravity-flow gutters beneath.

Anythings. Even a contact lens. Unless it flew somewhere into the sawdust that powders the rubber cow mats, and cushions the center alleyway so the cows have firm footing.

"Get the flashlight!"

The tiny, quarter-inch diameter of a plastic hard contact lens will reflect the light of a flashlight and make it more easily seen. Not that finding the little rascals is ever easy. The only other two I've lost, in a decade of wearing them, dropped in heifer bedding, and were never seen again.

Likely, though, that little lens had landed atop the slightly thickened top of the gutter slurry, which is about two feet below the grates, and could be picked up if I could just find it.

Off came the removable grates, and sprawling on my stomach in the alleyway sawdust, the search with the flashlight began.

It was the first time I'd ever been that intimate with the manure handling system. And, while I knew that a digestive process of the waste began as it slowly flowed to the holding lagoon, never had the proof been so obvious.

Tiny bubbles surfaced here and there from the liquids beneath, fermenting the resource that we would return to the fields to nourish and renew the soils.

Bubbles. Tiny, shiny bubbles. Bubbles, that when hit with the glow of a flashlight, looked exactly, precisely, like a contact lens.

After gingerly poking a finger at a couple random bubbles, reality set in. Talk about your proverbial needle in the haystack.

Even after nearly an hour, off and on, of searching by the farmer and I, it was apparent that the lone beneficiary of this disaster was going to be my optometrist.

So — it's back to wearing, as I should have been, the pair of safety glasses purposely acquired to protect the lens from being knocked from my eye during milking.

Go ahead. Laugh, kids. Call me "four eyes." Names will never hurt me....and they're a doggone sight cheaper than a new contact lens.

Franklin County lists Century Farms

CHAMBERSBURG — An estimated 15-20 Franklin county farms will be designated as "Century Farms" at the forthcoming Franklin County Farm-City Week Banquet, according to County Agent John Shearer.

This honor is available to present farmers whose farms have been in the family for one hundred years or more.

The awards will be presented at the thirteenth annual Franklin County Farm-City Week Banquet at Kauffman's Community Center on November 23. A Franklin County Ag-products Social Hour at 6 p.m. will precede the dinner at 6:45 p.m. It will feature local commodities served by honey queen, Lori Harshman; dairy princess, Michelle Martin; and apple queen, Tammy Keller.

Dalton Paul, chairman of the Franklin County Farm-City Week committee, urges everyone to participate in this gesture of goodwill. Tickets for the banquet will be available until November 15 from the following: Vo-Tech School, Chamber of Commerce offices in Chambersburg and Waynesboro, Franklin County ASCS Office, Cooperative Extension Service, and Farm-City Week Committee members: Carl Allison, Miriam Burkholder, Jean Covert, Ken Doyle, Mrs. Andrew Fitz, Mrs. Bruce Gamble, Betty Gayman, Marie Gipe, Eugene Hege, Ray Kauffman, Fred Oaks, Ethel Picking, Gerald Reichard, Mike Small, Betty Wingert, and Myron Young.

Over 500 attend 65th county Farm Women convention

BY SALLY BAIR
Staff Correspondent

LANCASTER — It was a trip down memory lane for a record 500 women who attended the 65th annual convention of the Lancaster County Society of Farm Women, held last Saturday at the Farm and Home Center.

The women honored the one farm woman who has attended every one of the 65 conventions and who was instrumental in starting the first society in 1917. Barbara Moore, 905 Orchard Road, Lititz, will be 98 later this month but remembers vividly those early days of Farm Women.

In a talk with Faye Garman of Society 1, Mrs. Moore revealed some of the early activities of farm women and some of the changes over the years. The memories were based on diaries kept by Mrs. Moore and were organized with the help of Mary Clark, whose mother, Mrs. Christ Brubaker, was a charter member of that first organization.

The first society in Pennsylvania was organized with the help of Mrs. Frank Black who had started a society in Somerset County in 1914. Mrs. Moore recalls, "She wanted us to be social. We've gone far away from her plan."

Mrs. Moore recalls that at their sixth meeting they had 72 people and "ran out of refreshments." The speaker was a man who spoke on marketing, and quoted scripture."

Mrs. Moore says, "We always had the first Saturday of the month as our meetings, and if you had a child who could sing, it was on the program!"

They read a letter received by Mrs. Moore from a man in Germany who was researching Pennsylvania German Farm organizations. One question concerned how many members could speak the Pennsylvania German dialect, and Mrs. Moore replies that half the members could. This was in 1928.

One exciting event for Mrs. Moore was traveling to Washington, D.C. with Extension Home Economist Miss Forbes for a meeting with farm women from other parts of the world. There was a party for the women on the White House lawn, hosted by Franklin Delano Roosevelt and his wife Eleanor.

Mrs. Moore also recalls helping to organize 4-H clubs by going with the aforementioned Mrs. Brubaker to talk with the Farm Bureau about sponsoring the clubs. Mrs. Moore recalled, "Some people thought it wouldn't work because people were too reticent in this county. I was a leader for 10 years."

What is the biggest change from those early years? Without hesitating, Mrs. Moore replies, "They talk better. They were all shy at our first meeting."

And what of the future? "They'll continue to grow. There are youngsters coming along who will take up where we leave off."

Mrs. Moore received a standing ovation from the group, and later was honored with a pin from York County's president.

Fran Sauder, right, presented two checks in the amount of $1252.50 to each the American Heart Association, represented here by Joan Oberrender, and the Office of Aging's David Haverstick. The money, donated by all societies, was collected as part of the annual county projects.

Barbara Moore of Lititz was honored for having attended all 65 county conventions by the more than 500 Farm Women who attended the convention last Saturday. In a talk with Faye Garman of Society 1, left, Mrs. Moore revealed some of the early activities of the chapters over the years, for the attendants.

It was pointed out that Mrs. Moore recently acquired a part-time job as receptionist in her grandson's doctor's office, and has received her first pay check. An avid Farm Woman member, she has also attended nearly 40 of the state conventions held annually. She once belonged to two societies, because after helping organize Society 4, they asked her to stay as a member.

In other recognition of years gone by, current President Fran Sauder, Mount Joy, recognized the past county presidents. Fifteen of the past 19 presidents were on hand, and they responded with a chorus of their own.

A highlight of the day was presenting two checks in the amount of $1252.50 each to the American Heart Association, Lancaster Chapter, and the Office of the Aging as the county projects. The money was contributed by all societies. Accepting for the Office of the Aging was David Haverstick who told the women the funds will be used to continue their boarding homes project for which funds were lost. He also encouraged individual societies to consider visiting boarding homes as a project.

Joan Oberrender accepted for the Heart Association, saying the money will go to their continuing educational programs, and community services.

There were nearly 60 guests from neighboring counties who were treated to a gift from a "hospitality basket" which featured Lancaster County items. Mrs. Marie Baughman, state president from Franklin County, brought greetings and congratulations to the county and installed the new county officers and local officers.

Elected to serve as county secretary was Mrs. Roy Book, a member of Society 28, and elected treasurer was Mrs. Glenn Burkholder, a member of Society 23. Fran Sauder will continue in her second year of her term as president and Joan Hershey is in the second year as first vice president.

The attendance award was won by Barbara Moore's own Society 1 which turned out in force to help honor her, with 73 percent of its membership. In second place was Society 22 with 69 percent of its membership.

Vice President Joan Hershey reported that the county's 33 societies with 1,109 members, had donated $10,480 to worthwhile causes. She says, "They give freely, care deeply and share a portion of His love."

Featured speaker for the 65th annual convention of Lancaster Farm Women was Marianne Fischer, who suffered through the World War II occupation of the Nazis, in Budapest, Hungary.

In her report, President Fran Sauder said, "They have found happiness in abundance. They have found that the art of living is caring and the art of caring is sharing and the art of sharing is living. It comes full circle."

The featured speaker also spoke of memories, but hers were less pleasant than those remembered by the farm women. Marianne Fischer was brought up as a Jewish woman in Budapest. Hungary and suffered through the World War II occupation of the Nazis. She said she had been a young Jew in Hungary who had everything going for herself. She had loving parents who had taught her all the Jewish traditions.

In a heavily accented voice and with a sense of humor she related her teenaged years in Budapest. She kept the women spellbound as she related how her life changed from a carefree young teenager to a woman who did not know what would come on the morrow.

She wanted to take English lessons as many did, so she could speak to the Americans when they came. She took lessons from a Hebrew Christian, which she explained is a Jewish person "who has accepted the promised Messiah. They are believers in Jesus Christ." Her future husband, her boyfriend at the time, took lessons from the same teacher and eventually both of them became Jewish Christians. This was difficult for her mother to have her break from a strong Jewish tradition, but Marianne said, "I had a wonderful mother who kept me in her love." Despite their change in beliefs, their appearance and their papers remained the same. They were Jewish and under the same threat as other Jews.

All of Budapest awaited the American Allies, Marianne recalled, "so we could escape persecution." The happiness of childhood was shattered when Jews were ordered into ghettos with 12 people to a bedroom. Since there were rumors that unmarried Jewish women were taken for the pleasures of German soldiers, Marianne and her boyfriend George decided to get married.

Over 500 attend convention

Within a month she became pregnant, and because of rumors of what was going on the countryside, well-meaning friends advised her to get an abortion, which was legal. "I believed in the sanctity of life and I couldn't," Marianne said simply.

Eventually her husband went to a forced labor camp which Marianne says in reality was worse than the horrors depicted in recent television movies. All women except those in advanced stages of pregnancies and those with children under a year were to go on a forced march from Budapest to Vienna. Those who couldn't keep up would be shot in the head. Since Marianne was not far along in her pregnancy, she appeared for the march, but a soldier said, "Go home, you look like a horse."

Suffering harrassment after harrassment, Budapest was eventually surrounded and with food scarce. Jews were to be sent to gas chambers so they need not be fed. Marianne said, "Nothing is impossible with the Lord. There is always a Gentile willing to help." They eventually got Swiss documents and were put in a building with others who had Swiss papers, with 48 people to every two bedroom apartment. They had a spoonful of jelly and a spoonful of lard each day, Marianne related.

George escaped from labor camp before they were all sent to the gas chamber, and Marianne was reunited with him in a factory with 80 other Jews who were nourished with food brought by a Gentile.

The Russians came, which was liberation for them, and they were allowed to return to what was left of their homes. After they were home, Marianne learned that her baby would be stillborn, and despite a medical exam required by the state "there was no medical reason the baby died." Marianne recalls, "The Lord gave me that child so I don't go to the death march in Vienna."

Eventually the Iron Curtain fell, following an election in which 90 percent of the eligible voters turned out. Nevetheless, Marianne says, "A handful falsified the elections. You only need a handful to change." She urged the women to vote "and preserve the freedom given by God. Pray for the wisdom of the government."

She and her family chose to leave Hungary when the opportunity came. They obtained a visa from Paraguay but had to wait to obtain passports to leave the country. "Why are passports so hard to come by?" she questioned. "Because everybody would leave if they had passports."

When the boat landed in New York, they were taken to Ellis Island as undesirable aliens, and became homeless people when Paraguay cancelled their visas. They eventually were taken into a home by people who had known their former English teacher in Hungary, and were allowed to stay for four months.

Deportation proceedings were carried out against them, and eventually Australia agreed to take them. Suitable transportation was not available, and with Marianne in her eighth month of pregnancy, they could not travel. When their third child was born, under the law he was an American citizen. They then petitioned the government "to allow the parents to stay and support the American citizen." The Lord can answer prayers, Marianne reminded the group. Her happy ending came when her brothers were allowed to leave Hungary and her mother visited her and became a Hebrew Christian before she died.

Her story was one of terror and hope, unraveled in often humorous anecdotes, and despite the seriousness of the message, Marianne captured the women's interest.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

People like to talk about the odd names of towns in Lancaster County. They often mention Paradise, Bird-in-Hand and Intercourse. The village of Blue Ball, Peach Bottom and White Horse are also cited.

But when my husband and I drove across the country this summer, I make a few notes of unusual names of places. It's easy to let one's imagination run wild in trying to decide how they might have been given these odd names.

What about Clothesline Road — did someone regularly have enormous wash lines full of clothes there?

Zero Road might have been so called because a person living there always claimed that his place was colder than anyone else's.

And Poison Spider Road might have had a sinister tale behind its naming.

I'll let you use your own ideas on these roads that we passed: Paradise Valley Road, Prison Farm Road and Churn Creek Road.

Some of the ranches in the west had posts at the entrance to their spreads with wind-polished steer horns and antelope antlers hung on them. Three names that I remember are Wind Rock, Silver Bow and Thunderhead.

Some "towns" greeting us with official metal name posts that also stated the population. Some had five, nine or ten listed as the total number of inhabitants! We crossed Skillet Fork River and Blackfoot River but Louse Creek and Jumpoff Joe Creek had more picturesque names.

To finish the list, I might mention the Bearmouth Area that we drove through, and also Beavertail town. What do you think might have happened to flocks of sheep in an area named Sheepeater Cliffs?

I could go on and on, but I'm sure you get the idea that the sky is the limit in naming new territory.

Lancaster 4-H Horse and Pony clubs collect

LITITZ—Fifteen riders from the Lancaster County 4-H Horse and Pony Clubs recently collected about $100 for the Lancaster County 4-H Therapeutic Riding Program, which is sponsored by the 4-H.

The money will be used to help maintain the horses used in the program and purchase safety equipment for the riders.

Dave Reintz, Manheim, led the ride, which was planned by the Boots and Saddles Club in the county. Another ride is planned for sometime in the spring of 1983.

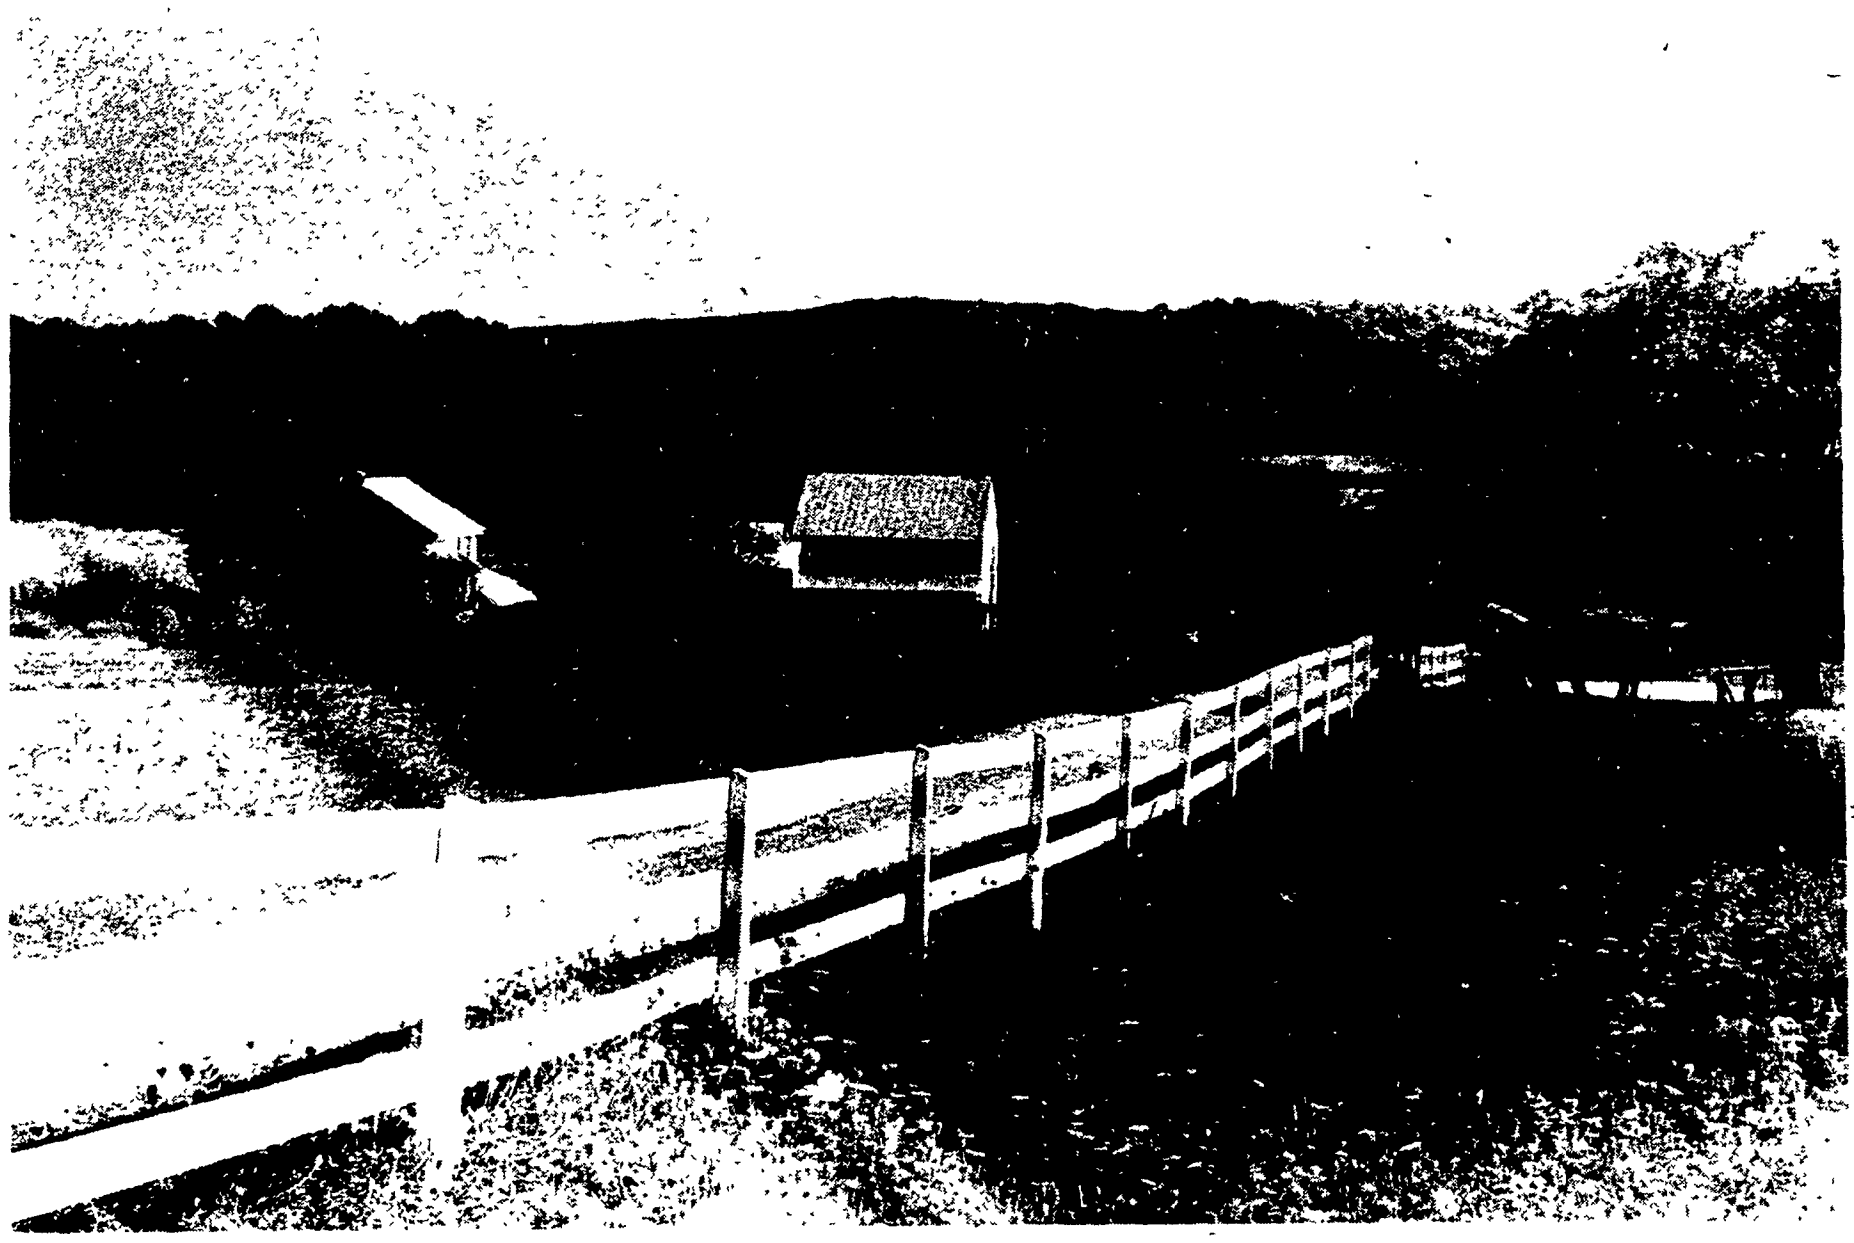
Do you want to help peel back the shadow?



If any organization, business or individual cares enough about the future of agriculture to want more information about the proposed hazardous waste landfill dump at Narvon, contact:

P.S. -- Lancaster County pauses this coming week to once again honor its Century Farms. The coming week's six farms bring the county total to 70 so honored over the past seven years. If there had been hazardous waste dumps in Lancaster County a century or more ago, I wonder how many of these farms would still be around to be honored. -- Dick Anglestein

Martins sweep 4-H capon round-up

BY DEBBIE KOONTZ

LANCASTER — The Martin family of Rl Conestoga made the Lancaster Co. 4-H Capon Round-up a family affair as nineteen-year-old Brian and his sister Deb, 15, captured the champion and reserve champion titles, respectively, out of 12 other contestants, here Tuesday.

Sponsored by members of the local chapter of the Kiwanis Club, and held at Andy's Catering in Rl Millersville, the contest offered what Extension Agent Jay Irwin termed, "a unique project including all phases of agriculture, from feeding to actual packaging and marketing."

The 4-H members, each displaying two capons at the contest, all received their birds the first week of June already caponized and three weeks old. Irwin explained that this is done so all contestants start on the same level and that their achievement is therefore determined by their own work.

The birds, which averaged in weight between 10 and 11 pounds this year, were judged by John Hoffman, executive director of the Poultry Federation in Harrisburg.

Hoffman described the winning pair of capons as having been bled well with little liquid content, no bruises and breaks, adequate fat tissue under the skin, with conformity and meat covering the bones well.

Brian, who graduated from Penn Manor High School last year, is in his first year of the 4-H capon project. He currently is working on the family's farm.

Deb is a sophomore at Penn Manor and in her third year on the capon project.

Deb is also involved in a 4-H sheep project and serves as a teen leader. She is president of both the Lancaster Co. Woolies Club and the Penn Manor Community Club, and is a member of the Manor FFA.

The Kiwanis Club donated $100 to the contest, allowing all 14 contestants to win prize money. Members also purchased the birds following the judging.

According to Irwin, "The kids did an excellent job packaging these birds for members to see. We're really pleased with their efforts this year."

Gardeners should not rely on sprays only to combat plant pests.

While pesticides, properly used, are effective against insect and disease problems, gardeners can add an extra measure of control through cultural practices including thorough garden clean-up at this time of year.

Many insects and disease organisms spend the winter in gardens and yards on, in, or under plant debris. By removing and discarding dead plants, weeds, fallen leaves, fruits and twigs, and dead branches, some sources of next years problems can be eliminated.

For example, brown rot of peaches is cause by a fungus that overwinters on mummied fruits and twig cankers. These are the source of next years infection; clean-up and pruning are important. The fungus that causes the notorious blackspot of roses survives winter in the fallen leaves, as do many of the leaf disease fungi. Raking and removal are good added control measures.

The squash bug is a pest that is difficult to control, even with pesticides. The adult overwinters under garden debris, so destroying old vines and other refuse is an important step toward reducing populations. The iris borer, a moth, lays eggs in late summer on the old leaves and other nearby plant litter. Fall clean-up will clean up potential borers.

These few examples illustrate why cleaning the garden is an important phase in a gardener's campaign against garden pests. It is best not to compost materials that are diseased or post infested unless the material will not be used for several years.

3-D Quilting

Why not make a plush, colorful butterfly to hang on the wall or throw on a sofa? All you need are fabric scraps stuffing and an empty spot to hang it or throw it.

Each section of the butterfly is sewn, stuffed, and stitched to a plain backing. The process is time-consuming but well worth the effort. Almost everybody, regardless of their sewing skills, can make a professional looking 3-dimensional butterfly with ease.

Suggestion: Use preshrunk, non-stretch, reasonably sturdy fabrics for the butterfly sections and backing.

PATTERNS: 1. For a giant butterfly, about 18x15 inches, draw an upper wing section about 8 inches long. Make it 3 inches wide at one end, tapering to 1½ inches wide at the other end.

2. Draw a lower wing section about 7 inches long.

Make it 2½ inches wide at one end, tapering to 1¼ inches wide at the other end.

3. Draw the body pattern about 7 inches long and 2¼ inches wide.

4. Draw a 2¼ inch diameter circle for the head.

CUTTING THE FABRICS: 1. Using the paper patterns, cut six upper wing sections and four lower wing sections.

2. Cut six more upper wing sections and four more lower wing sections, this time ¾ inches larger all around than the paper patterns.

3. Cut one body section and one head section.

4. Cut a second body section and a second head section, this time ¾ inches larger all around than the paper pattern.

2. On all the larger pieces, baste a line of stitching ¾ inches from the raw edge.

3. Gather thread to make each large piece the same size as its small counter-part.

4. With wrong sides together, stitch each pair together. Leave 2 inches open for turning.

5. Turn each section to the right side. Add stuffing to make larger side puff up, while the smaller side remains flat.

6. Stitch openings closed.

2. Stitch upper wing sections together at side edges.

3. Stitch lower wing sections together at side edges.

4. Stitch head to body.

5. Stitch wings to body.

2. Lay butterfly, right side up, on wrong side of backing fabric.

3. Trace shape of butterfly onto fabric.

4. Cut out butterfly from fabric and batting.

3. Turn to right side.

4. For pillows, add extra stuffing. Wall hangings may be left as is.

5. Sew opening closed with tiny hem stitches.

Crawford Countian wears Lamb and Wool crown

HARRISBURG — The Pennsylvania Lamb and Wool Growers crowned Irene Williams of Crawford County as their 1983 Queen during ceremonies held Saturday, November 6, in conjunction with the Keystone International Livestock Exposition in Harrisburg.

The 19-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gary V. Williams of Saegertown, Irene is a sophomore at Behrend College of Penn State University majoring in Agricultural Education. Irene hopes to pursue a career in Extension Service after graduation.

Irene and her parents have about 40 head of Hampshire and Montadale sheep on their 113 acre farm and also raise Hereford-cross beef cattle.

An 11-year 4-H veteran, Irene began showing sheep in 1975 and exhibited at Crawford and Erie count fairs in addition to 4-H shows.

Irene is very active in all aspects of the 4-H program, including livestock judging and "Make it with Wool" contests.

Irene has some ideas for the promotion of the sheep industry that she hopes to implement during her reign as queen. She would like to see ladies lead contests available on the district level across Pennsylvania to encourage more young people to become interested in the promotion of sheep and wool.

Irene says she feels that local Sheep and Wool Growers associations should organize fashion show featuring clothing made of wool and promote recipes using lamb on the local level to expose the public to these products.

Runnerup in the competition was Carol Ann Shuler, 19, daughter of Carol and Marilyn Shuler of Fenelton, Butler County. Miss Shuler is a graduate of Butler Senior High School and is a member of the FFA. Her family raises registered Suffolk sheep.

Irene Williams, 19, of Crawford County receives the 1983 Lamb and Wool Queen crown from last year's royalty Kathy Jo Hixenbaugh. The Queen contest was held in conjunction with the Keystone International Livestock Exposition.

Pa. Livestock Assn. honors Schicks and youth

BY DICK ANGLESTEIN

GRANTVILLE — The Pennsylvania Livestock Association gazed back into the past last weekend and took a look into the future.

The Association, gathering for its annual meeting and banquet:

– Honored a member couple – Herbert and Anna Marie Schick, R2 Kutztown – for their contributions to the association and the livestock industry.

–Honored four Pennsylvania youths for their overall participation in livestock activities. The FFA honorees are Jeff McConn, R2 West Alexander, first; and Barbara Lynn Herr, R2 Narvon, second. The 4-H honorees are Don Bishop, R2 Homer City, first; and Dorothy M. Harr, R1 Latrobe, second.

–And named a three-man committee to explore the feasibility of creating the post of executive director of the Association.

The naming of the three-man committee to study the need for an executive director and compile a job description, if the need so dictates, was approved at the Association's annual meeting.

The three-man committee includes Robert E. Gregory, chairman, of Pennfield Corporation, Lancaster; John J. Hess III, of Hess Mills, Paradise; and Lester Burdette, Extension livestock specialist at Penn State. The committee expects to report back to the Association at the next board meeting on January 27.

Schick was named Livestock Man of the Year at the Association's annual banquet Saturday night at the Holiday Inn at Grantville. He and his wife, Anna Marie, operate a hog operation near Kutztown.

Schick entered the hog business in 1960 from the photoengraving field and was helped in getting started by the late Dwight Younkin, professor of animal science extension at Penn State; and Henry Gruber, of New Tripoli.

Schick is secretary-treasurer of the Pennsylvania Pork Producers Council and a delegate to the National Pork Producers Council.

Jeff McConn, 17, son of Joseph and Donna McConn, Washington County, received the Outstanding Achievement Award in FFA Livestock Projects Work. A graduate of McGuffey High School, Jeff has been actively involved in youth livestock programs with the McGuffey FFA Chapter and the Washington County 4-H for many years.

Barb Herr, 19, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Robert Herr, Lancaster County, received the runnerup FFA award. A graduate of Garden Spot High School, New Holland, she is a freshman in Animal Production at Penn State. She has been a perennial exhibitor and winner in sheep, hog and beef projects.

Don Bishop, 18, son of Robert and Delores Bishop, Indiana County, received the Outstanding Achievement Award in 4-H Livestock Project Works. Currently a freshman at Indiana University of Pennsylvania, Don has been involved in 4-H for the past 10 years.

The runnerup award in 4-H went to Dorothy M. Harr, 17, daughter of Merle and Betty Harr, Westmoreland County. A senior at Mt. Pleasant Area Senior High School, she plans to continue her education in medicine.

Speaker at the banquet was Mike Ondik, Penn State deer researcher, who discussed a slide presentation on White Tails and the preservation of their habitat, as well as farmland and the environment.

Ondik threw out a challenge to farmers asking how long they intended to borrow from the future to produce today. He spoke of the equivalent of entire 40-acre farms floating down to the Chesapeake due to soil erosion.

"Somewhere in the future we're gonna' kick our butts for covering over all of this farmland with concrete," he said.

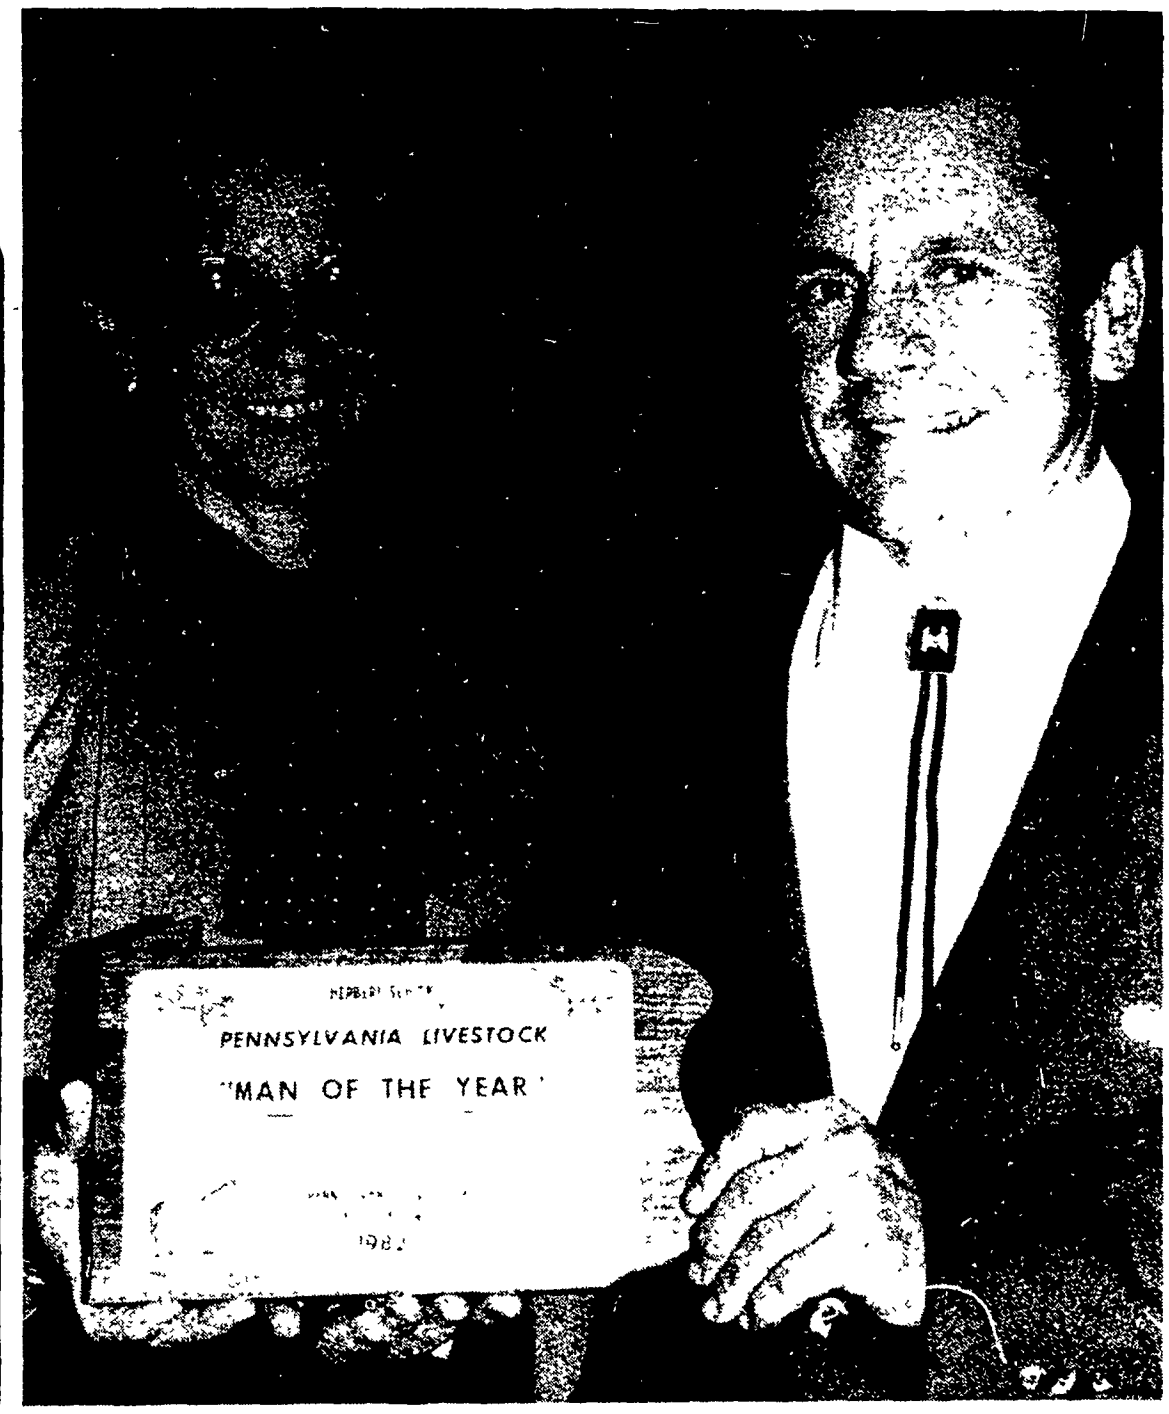
"The land is essentially habitat and each animal, including us, needs a certain requirement of space."

He called on the Pennsylvania Game Commission to be more receptive to suggestions from others, such as farmers and foresters. He suggested that farmers get together and lease blocks of land to hunters, as they do in other states.

"Are we going to keep taking things from our kids?" he asked.

"Are we going to let technology take over or are we going to strike a compromise with it?

"Are we going to leave this world in at least as good a shape as it was left for us?"



Honored by the Pennsylvania Livestock Association for their contributions to the industry are Herb and Anna Marie Schick, R2 Kutztown.

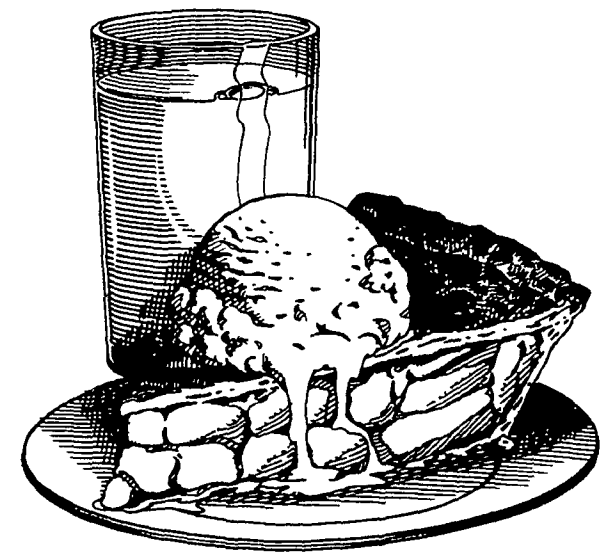
HOW TO GET A BIGGER PIECE OF YOUR OWN PIE.



Every time you turn around, somebody's taking a bigger slice of your profit.

But Surge has a way to make your piece bigger. And the electric company's smaller.

It's called the ARC Cooling Tank. And it's up to 15% more efficient than earlier models. So it costs you less to operate. Lowers your bill. Raises your net. All through what we call Automatic Response Cooling.

As milk flow increases into the tank, refrigerant flow increases to cool it faster. As milk flow decreases, so does the load on your condenser.

And the polyurethane foam insulation seals between the inner and outer tanks, holding the temperature better.

You can choose from nine sizes, too. From 500 to 3,000 gallons. In durable white polyurethane enamel finish or traditional stainless steel. Both with remote digital thermometer and a tiltable gauge rod calibrated in gallons, liters and pounds.

We can make your cows worth more.

Maryland woman tops KILE Ladies Lead

HARRISBURG — Natalie Schley, 19, of Myersville, Maryland, was judged best of 21 contestants to win the title in the Ladies Lead competition Saturday during the Keystone International Livestock Exposition.

The objective of the competition was to present a class of yearling ewes in the most attractive manner and give spectators an opportunity to see the best of the sheep industry.

Contestants were judged on several factors including their costume which must be 100 percent wool; the control and presentation of their animals; and the appearance of the ewe. The sheep must be registered yearling ewes that have been conditioned, fitted and trained to show at halter.

Schley's entry was a Hampshire ewe opened by Hope's Hampshires of Knoxville, Maryland.

Natalie's first place outfit featured a chestnut brown jacket and skirt ensemble. The tailored box jacket included padded shoulders and button-down front. A striped silk blouse buttoned down the side and had a side tie at the collar. Natalie's wrap-around skirt had front pleats and side pockets. To complete the outfit of 100 percent worsted wool, a matching wool felt hat and brown pumps were added.

A sophomore at Virginia Tech majoring in Animals Science with a minor in Communications, Natalie served as the 1980 Maryland Lamb and Wool Queen. She has participated in numberous Ladies Leadlines and Decorated Lamb Contests. In addition, Natalie raises purebred Suffolks at her Frederick County home.

Natalie was presented with a trophy by the Pennsylvania Livestock Association and the first place prize of $20. Placing second, third and fourth were Michelle Yontz, 17, of Pittston, NJ; Diance Louise Miller, 17, of Lehighton, Carbon County; and Kathy Jo Hixenbaugh of Beaver, Beaver County.

Lancaster County Exhibitor Margaret Herr puts her ewe through its paces during KILE's Ladies Lead contest.

Natalie Schley, of Myersville, Maryland, bested a field of more than 20 entrants to earn the blue ribbon in the fashionable Ladies Lead competition, held during the Keystone International Livestock Exposition in Harrisburg.

PFA women learn how to "explain ag"

HERSHEY — The Women's Conference during this week's 32nd Annual Meeting of the Pennsylvania Farmers' Assn. focused on "explaining agriculture." A panel of experts provided timely advice to the assembled PFA women on Tuesday afternoon. Chairman Nellie Crawford urged the group to take what they learned during the session home and apply it to their own county organizational information efforts.

First on the panel was Joyce Freeman, manager of the Office of Economic Development of the Pa. Dept. of Agriculture. She stressed the need to focus on the youth when telling agriculture's story. She cited the current efforts of the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture in developing an ag curriculum called "Ag in the Classroom."

Marsha Herndon, director of Education and Women's Activities with the American Farm Bureau Federation, encouraged the PFA women to concentrate some of their information efforts in five areas: civic and service organizations; businesses and business organizations, professional associations; church leaders; and elected officials. She encouraged them to establish a rapport — a common ground — by listening to the other person's problems and by showing enthusiasm and interest. She also suggested PFA Women's committees provide resource information and speakers of these types of groups in order to get the farm message across.

The PFA women also heard from Gregg Finn, director of information for the Massachusetts Farm Bureau Federation and Henry R. Merges, editor of the York Dispatch. Both provided ideas on how to get their message across to the public through media channels. — SM

Practice caution when taking non-prescription drugs

LANCASTER — All drugs, including over-the-counter medicines, have some body-altering functions. They can all be potent and should be used with care.

Here are some basic rules to remember when taking non-prescription drugs:

1. Take them only when you need them. You shouldn't take aspirin, antacids, antihistamines, or other drugs merely as a matter of habit. Consult a physician if your symptoms continue; don't just continue to take more medicine.

2. Make sure you choose the drug that's right for yoursymptoms. Ask your pharmacist for advice. It is best not to select a combination of drug products for self-medication of symptons that can be relieved with a single drug.

3. Don't take two drugs at the same time unless you know it is safe to do so. Some drugs can produce adverse effects when taken together. Ask your pharmacist for help in making this decision.

4. Make sure you follow the directions on the label of the medication. It the drug is to be used by a child, by an older person, or by someone with a chronic condition, ask your pharmacist about the proper dosage.

5. Stop taking the drug when your condition no longer calls for it. Ask your pharmacist for advice on this matter if the label does not make it clear when to stop.

Pa. cattle win Charolais championships

BY SHEILA MILLER

HARRISBURG — Dauphin Countian Kaye Sweigard entered her solitary Charolais heifer at this year's Keystone International Livestock Exposition and walked out of the show ring with the Grand Champion female honors.

RCC Royal Heiress 3744 won her class of Senior Heifer Calves before being tagged Junior Champion by Judge Randall Reed of Columbus, Ohio. The September 1981 heifer is sired by RCC Royal Constructor I out of RCC Royal Lady 2969. She was purchased by Sweigard from Royal Charolais Co., Greensburg.

Sweigard, who is better known for her showing accomplishments with the black beef breed, is a student at the Harrisburg Area Community College. She will be transfering to Penn State next March and will be majoring in Animal Production.

Two Berks County brothers claimed championships in Monday's Charolais competition. Kirk and Kent Fisher of Oley showed their entries to Reserve Grand Champion Bull and Reserve Grand Champion Female honors, respectively.

Fifteen-year-old Kirk led his late summer yearling bull to a blue-ribbon win in class and on to the Reserve Junior Champion honors. BCF Mr. Express 462P is a July 1981 son of BCF Mr. Expectation 415.

The young cattlemen's herd numbers about 25 head. Up until their purchase of the reserve grand champion bull from Bratton Charolais of Lewistown, the boys used artificial insemination in breeding their cows.

When asked what created their interest in the beef business, Kirk said he was influenced because his father was in the 4-H club as a child. "I got involved in 4-H and got my first heifer a few years ago," Kirk recalled.

According to Margie Fisher, she and husband Steve encouraged the boys to get involved in beef production.

"They're building a herd which is a way of investing in the future. They could have put their money in the bank instead of in cattle, but they couldn't have learned as much by investing that way," she observed. "Now, when it's time for them to go to college — if that's what they want to do — they can sell some cattle."

The Grand Champion Bull honors of this year's Keystone Charolais show went to HVR Mac Innovation 1132, the summer yearling entry of Bob Evans Hidden Valley Ranch, Inc., Bidwell, Ohio.

Renners sweep KILE Hereford Show

HARRISBURG — Cattle from the registered beef herd of William and Earl Renner of Waynesburg, Greene County, swept Monday's Hereford show here at the Keystone International Livestock Exposition, claiming three of the four champion titles, all the group championships, and the premier breeder and exhibitor banners.

Amyr Grandee, a Chester County born and bred Arabian stallion, bested a strong field of entrants to claim the Grand Champion rosette. The 5-year-old Double-R bred stallion is currently standing stud at trainer Randy Stoneback's stables in Oxford and is owned by Martin and Phyllis Spector of Randlestown, Maryland.

The Timpte Twins are Tough.

Got Grain? Then get the trailers that are Timpte tough... the Super Hopper or the level floor Super Grain Trailer. They're not only built to take it... they're also built to cut fuel costs. The Super Hopper and the level floor Super Grain Trailers are lightweight and aerodynamically designed to reduce wind drag. When there's grain to be hauled, Timpte does the haulin' best and pulls a lot easier than the rest.

Pa. youth finish KILE steer contest with strong showing

Chad Barker, a 10-year-old first year 4-H member, from Kendallville, Indiana swept junior competition with his heavyweight steer and continued on to take home Grand Champion Steer honors. Chad may be a first year 4-H're but he is a three-year veteran of KILE and has been showing steers since he was 6-year-old.

With the exception of the heavyweight champion, Pennsylvania young people won all Champion and Reserve Champion honors in junior steer competition. The lightweight champion was shown by Jan Waltz of Manheim, and Gerald Hess of Conestoga showed the Reserve Champion.

Middleweight competition was won by Brenton Upperman of Chambersburg with Reserve Champion honors going to Pa[illegible] Templeton of Ebensburg.

In open competition, Kevin Kropp of Troy, Ohio exhibited the Champion Steer, another Chianina-Angus cross. This steer was not new to the show circuit, and had placed first in his class at the Ohio State Fair.

ANKEY, Iowa — The Soil Conservation Society of America has released a new book, Remote Sensing for Resource Management, which describes uses of remote sensing in managing natural resources.

The amount of data collected with the aid of photographic and other remote sensing techniques from low altitude aircraft and satellites has increased tremendously in the last decade. Remote Sensing for Resource Management explains the use of this growing pool of data in managing land and water resources.

The book's 55 chapters deal with the basic procedures for using remotely sensed data. There are many case histories of such uses. Section of the book cover the state of the art; uses applicable to land, water, vegetative, soil, and mining resources; applications by agricultural producers, industry, and local, state, and federal governmental agencies; and the future of remote sensing technology in relation to natural resources management.

The 688-page book contains more than 250 illustrations, including 119 full-color plates. It also includes appendixes listing sources of remotely sensed data, acronyms used in remote sensing, and a glossary of remote sensing terms.

Copies of the book are available for $45 ($40 for SCSA members) from SCSA, 7515 N.E. Ankeny Road, Ankeny, Iowa 50021-9764.

DAIRY GOATS

Up To $30/CWT Being Paid For Goat Milk

Clean and easy to handle, goats produce about one fifth as much milk as a cow They readily adapt to parlor and machine milking and conversion of most existing barns and parlors to handle goats is easily accomplished. Each free stalled goat requires fifteen square feet of sheltered space and twenty five square feet of outdoor paddock space A good dairy goat may consume three pounds of 16% grain mix and five pounds of legume or mixed hay, to produce nearly a gallon of milk per day average over a 305 day lactation Since goats are seasonal breeders a lighting program extending the days is often used in the late winter to achieve fall freshenings to produce more of the high priced winter milk Bulk pickups of minimum 1600 lb loads can be arranged within 150 miles of central New Jersey Contracts are presently available for several farms willing to eventually milk at least 100 head, to begin shipping milk in 1983

If you buy a new 8- or 10-hp walk-behind John Deere snow blower before December 31, 1982, with a normal down payment, you won't have any monthly payments to make until April 1, 1983. And to save you money there are no finance charges until March 1, 1983. So you can buy a new John Deere snow blower before the snow falls and pay for it after the snow melts

Pre-lubricated, sealed gearbox assures you dependable performance

Flex tubes are available optional in 3', 5' and 8' lengths for both 6" and 8" augers. Total flexibility allows bending in any direction to funnel flow of grain into hard-to-reach places.

Ruggedly constructed scissor-type undercarriage "tucks away" to get in close to bins for maximum reach. Trussed axle arms for strength and stability at any angle

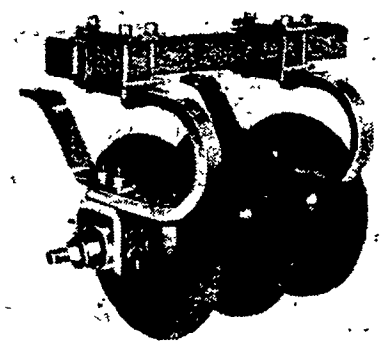
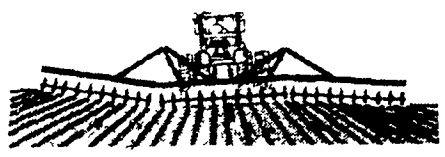
NOTICE: NEVER! NEVER! BUY A DISK HARROW BEFORE YOU CHECK THE UNMATCHABLE SUPERFOLD EXCLUSIVE AT OUR BEST PRICE!

Very Important Features You Should Consider:



Spring Bearing Hangers reduce shockloads to the blade, axles, bearings and frame when working in fields with rocks or stumps. The Rhino 1" x 2" spring bearing hangers provide maximum strength, add protection, and reduce downtime expenses. The Rhino Quadraseal gang bearings are trunnion mounted to the spring bearing hangers to allow the gangs to flex freely without undue stress being placed on the gang axle.



Wing Flotation. Rhino Flex 90B wings are hinged so that they provide uniform weight distribution and flex freely to follow the ground contour for uniform plowing. For better side-to-side leveling, the wing hinges are mounted 16" inside the center section to give a more parallel flexing action between center section and wing disc blades

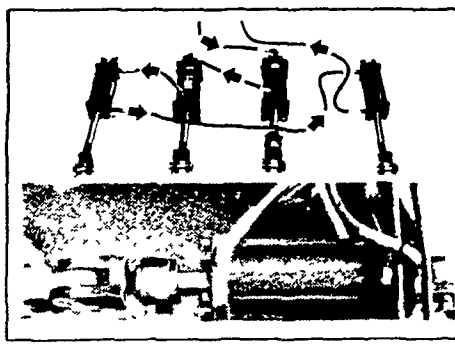
It's The Best!



Slave Hydraulics — Adjustable Depth Control. Slave hydraulics provide simultaneous action of all cylinders when raising or lowering. This action assures you of a uniform plowing depth, no matter what the soil conditions might be Plowing depth can be set precisely by adjustment of a depth stop on the master cylinder

Disc Spacing. The Flex 90B is available with 7½" or 9" disc spacing or a combination of 9" front 7½" rear All gang components are shipped completely assembled. No matter what your tillage needs are, the Flex 90B can be equipped to handle your requirements

- Heavy Duty Scrapers
- 22" Rhino Disc Blades
- Tapered Discs/Cover Discs. Three disc blades of step-down pattern from 22" to 20" to 18" and the 16" cover disc, on the rear gangs, give you a smooth, level, ridge-free job. Another RHINO advantage It's all standard equipment.

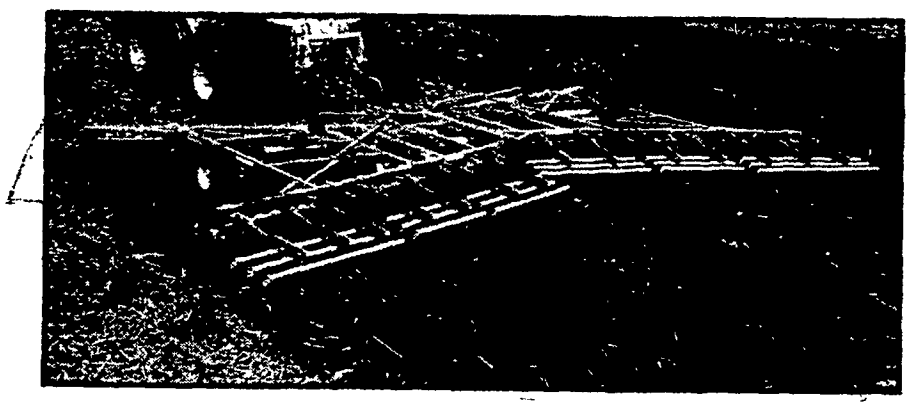
FARMER PREFERENCE HAS PROVEN THAT

Krause Discs Are Best



Whether the farmers buy their discs to cut or to finish, the Krause discs consistently perform better than the discs the farmers previously owned. And the Krause Rockflex design allows farmers to disc where they could not disc with their old discs without causing extensive gang damage. That's why the Krause Rockflex Disc became known as the disc that loves rocks.

But Now Krause Engineering Advances Make

Krause Discs Even Better

Some Improvements Made On 1982 Production Of Rockflex Discs Which Add To Their Performance And Reliability Are:

..."SUPERSEAL" REGREASABLE BEARINGS.
Still encased in rubber to reduce shock, the "Superseal" bearings are heavier for longer life and even better reliability.

..."SHOT-PEENED" ROCKFLEX BEARING ARMS.
The new "shot-peened" manufacturing process for the "rockflex" bearing arms will add double the life to the C-arm itself.

...ALLOY STEEL TIE RODS.
Special alloy steel tie rods are 30% to 70% stronger than the tie rods on many other brand disc harrows. They still have a nut on both ends for easy servicing.

...OPTIONAL HEAVY-DUTY DISC BLADES.
5/16"x24" Diameter blades — plain or notched — on 1740 and 2400 Series.
¼ x 22" diameter blades — plain or notched — on 2200, 1580 and 1900 series.

NOW IS THE TIME TO TRADE-UP TO KRAUSE

GUNITE Silo Relining & Repairs

1. Excellent bonding
2. High Density
3. Extreme strength and hardness
4. High resistance to absorption

The excellent physical properties of the material are due to the water content being only the amount needed to satisfy chemical hydration.
Reseal and re-strengthen your silo with Gunite.

Marstellar wins regional FFA crops award

BY JOYCE BUPP
Staff Correspondent

STEWARTSTOWN — At the tender age of five, John Marstellar Jr.'s thought processes were already operating like that of a typical farmer.

He approached his dad, and with the seriousness that only a five year old can muster, informed John, Sr., that, if he'd just plant some corn in that pasture below the buildings, he'd at least get something off it.

Such an attitude likely had something to do with his being named the Eastern Region Crops Proficiency award winner of the Future Farmers of America this year.

With that award, which Marstellar received this week at the group's national convention in Kansas City, Missouri, came a plaque, a check for $250, and payment for a portion of his travel expenses. Earlier, he'd won another $100 as the state winner.

Basis of the judging competition was a detailed eight-page application covering the intricate bookkeeping of four-year's-worth of FFA field crops projects at Kennard-Dale High School.

Marstellar and his wife Chris recently entered into partnership with his parents, Mary and John, Sr., on the family's 420-acre picturesque Green Valley Farm, R3 Stewartstown. With rented ground, they farm some 640 acres in corn, soybeans, wheat and barley, and finish out steers in a 500-head-capacity feedlot.

As a freshman in Kennard Dale's vocational-agriculture program, Marstellar cropped five acres each to corn and beans. He doubled that acreage for his sophomore year, and by the time he was a senior, was putting out 85 acres of corn, 66 of beans and 25 in barley.

Marketing methods of the crops played a portion in the judging for the FFA award. Bulk of the harvest is sold on forward contracts, generally signed by Marstellar in June.

Two years ago, he locked in a $3.70 per bushel figure, and the following year contracted at $2.70.

Bean yields range in the 35 to 40 bushel area, hauled to the Baltimore docks for export shipping. Top price received last year by Marstellar for one prime load of beans was $8.25.

His third crop, barley, ranges in the 75-bushel-per-acre area, and is marketed for seed. A quality foundation stock of early, bearded Barsoy is used.

"We then clean, certify and seel part of the barley as seed for other growers," notes the proficiency award winner.

Marstellar's first farm love is probably handling the field equipment, a chore he's relished since he began running tractors as a seven year old. But the comfortable seat in the closed cab of the six-row John Deere combine is one of the FFA winner's favorite spots for viewing the field crops.

The first combine was added to the Marstellar's line of equipment about a decade ago. When John turned 12, he figured it was time for his dad to show him how to run the sheller.

"He showed me the gears and hasn't gotten back on since," he quips, a wide easy grin creasing the field-tanned face.

Motors, and keeping them humming, hold a fascination for Marstellar, who overhauled his first tractor diesel engine while still in high school, at the vo-ag shop. Following graduation from Kennard-Dale in 1981, he studied automotive mechanics at the Vale Technical Institute in Blairsville.

Two more diesel engines have gotten complete reworking in the past two winters, along with all the routine maintenance chores involved in keeping a full line of farm equipment in prime running condition. Next on Marstellar's list of goals is to earn his state inspection license, so that he can handle that regular sticker-work on the farm's trucks and automobiles.

Although the regional crops proficiency award is Marstellar's highest FFA honor, he's earned an impressive list of local wins.

In addition to his greenhand, chapter and chapter star awards, his accumulation of honors include the DeKalb trophy for leadership, Production Credit award for record keeping, and the 1981 FFA state livestock award, presented by the Pennsylvania Livestock Association.

And, by the time he's been awarded his plaque and check at the Kansas City meeting, he may have added another title to the list: new father. The young Marstellar's are expecting their first child, expanding Green Valley to a three-generation farm family.

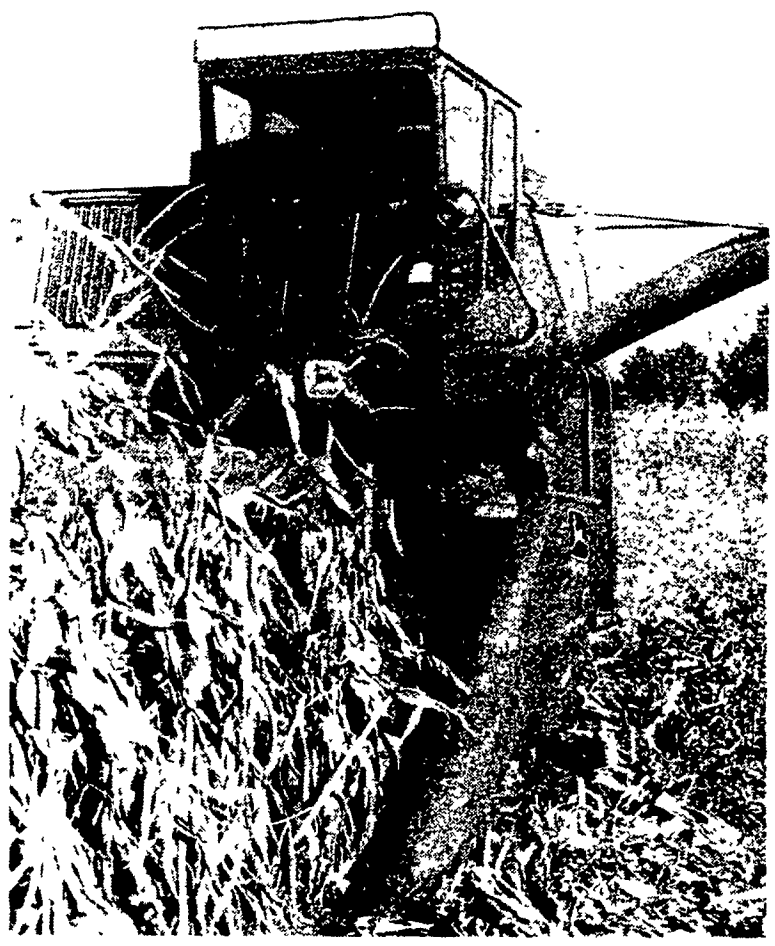
"I learned from my dad, and learned from Mr. Travis, and what each taught me helped with what I learned from the other," he adds.

In the early 1960's, John Marstellar, Sr., attended the Kansas City convention to accept the American Farmer degree he'd earned.

John, Jr., just as he followed his dad from barn, to shop, to field, to equipment, hopes that he'll also follow dad in some day winning that coveted highest FFA honor.

And, finally, he hopes to someday follow his dad as owner of the family farm, continuing the grain and beef operation, until his children can someday follow in his footsteps and carry on the Green Valley Farms heritage.



Since he was barely big enough to toddle after his dad, John Marstellar's been enthralled with the farming equipment. Behind the wheel of the massive combine, he maneuvers the lumbering machine as effortlessly as a youngster steering a bike.

John Marstellar, Jr's course in mechanics broadened his knowledge of engines and enables him to handle most of the farm machinery maintenance and major repairs. During the winter months of the past few years, he's overhauled three of the diesels

2. Storage for ALL forages & grain
3. Transportable
4. Easy to use and little maintenance
5. NO dangerous silo gases
6. Silo fires WON'T occur
7. Higher moisture forage
8. NO unloader to break down
9. Extra income and potential from custom bagging
10. THE Forage System for the 80's

JUST LISTEN TO WHAT THESE AG-BAG BELIEVERS HAVE TO SAY:

Kenneth Popham of Floresville, Texas

Kenneth runs a 465 cow Dairy and said this about AG-BAG: "At today's interest rates you can't afford any other type of storage .. Even with the yearly cost of bags it's still inexpensive storage... a whole lot cheaper than building barns and hiring help. I put up 13 bags last year and after seeing the results, I'll put up 25 bags this year. The bags are a good thing."

Don Carter of Parkdale, Oregon

"The best move I ever made"... says Don Carter in reference to his switch to bagging silage on his dairy near Parkdale, Oregon.

"I get 18% more feed from the same acreage and the feed lasts three times as long. I used to clean my bunks after three days, now I only need to clean them after 10 days."

Roland Rasmussen of Blair, Nebraska

"By labeling every bag as to date and kind of feed, I can mix my feeds and eliminate the guess work in making a ration I feed alfalfa silage, corn silage and ground ear corn stored exclusively in the bags, purchasing only my minerals and vitamin supplements"

"The AG-BAG system has enabled me to increase carrying capacity per acre at a reduced cost of gain"

Bert Anderson of Sceptre, Saskatchewan

"At least 30% more feed . . . I can guarantee at least that" says rancher, Bert Anderson, of Sceptre, Saskatchewan

"I've been able to cut my grain feeding costs in half since converting to the bagging. It's just like feeding grass I've also eliminated the need for a liquid supplement that we always fed before going to the AG-BAG System . . ."

HERE'S WHAT THE AG-BAG SYSTEM CAN DO FOR YOU
1 BAG	150 TONS
6 BAGS	900 TONS

Chester-Delaware Co. farmers welcome "city folk"

WEST CHESTER — "City folk are invited to visit area farms Nov. 20 as part of the annual Farm-City program," David Hodge, president of the Chester/Delaware Farmers' Association, announced today. Over the years, this has been a family event as parents and children enjoy an outing in the country.

"Farmers are taking this time and extending this invitation because consumers are just as important to farmers as the farmers are in growing the food for the consumers. You really can't have one without the other", Hodge explained.

Farm-City Week is sponsored by the over 800 members of the Farmers' Association and the local Chamber of Commerce. Farms open for visitation between the hours of 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. on Nov. 20 are:

- Barnard Orchards and Greenhouses - 45 acres of apples and 7 acres of peaches. There are also three green houses in which carnations and snapdragons are grown.
- Willowdale Farm - Farm consists of 300 cows and 1,000 acres of crops and pasture. The milk is bottled for 11 dairy stores in the area.
- Senneca-Kennett Foods Mushroom farm - Mushrooms grown here are used in both the fresh and canning markets.
- Shilo Farm - A thoroughbred horse breeding farm with 16 brood mares and stallions. In the heart of the Cheshire fox hunting area.
- Wal-Moore Dairy Farms - There are 140 milking cows and 100 replacement heifers at this unit — one of a four-unit family complex.

Also open from 10 a.m. to 12 noon will be the large animal research and hospital facility at New Bolton Center. This a part of the Veterinary Science Department of the University of Pennsylvania.

Brochures with a map and a list of farms are available by calling the Chester County Extension Service at 215/696-3500. Brochures are also available in local librarys.

USDA tightens import health test rules for Irish cattle

WASHINGTON, D.C. — U.S. Department of Agriculture officials have strengthened brucellosis testing requirements for cattle imported from the Republic of Ireland.

John K. Atwell, deputy administrator of USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, said recent occurrences of brucellosis in Irish cattle have shown that additional documentation is needed to assure disease-free status of imports.

USDA's amended animal import regulations, which take effect Dec. 1, require cattle imported from Ireland to originate from herds that meet rigid test standards of testing to demonstrate that they are free of brucellosis. This includes negative annual herd tests for the preceding two years and records showing that additions to the herd have the same brucellosis-free status.

In addition to the herd health status, individual animals will have to pass two negative brucellosis tests with an interval of not less than 60 days nor more than 120 days between tests. These tests must use all three of the accepted brucellosis testing procedures - the plate - or agglutination - test, the brucellosis card test and the complement fixation test.

Imported cattle must be maintained for at least 60 days before shipment at a separately isolation facility approved by Irish government veterinarians. From that facility they must be shipped directly to the U.S. port-of-entry quarantine station without further contact with other livestock.

This action was proposed by USDA officials May 2. Final action was published in the Nov. 1 Federal Register.

Brucellosis is a bacterial disease that causes breeding problems and losses from reduced calf crops and lower milk yields. A cooperative state-federal brucellosis program in the United States has succeeded in reducing the disease in cattle to an extremely low level.

Del. offers free forage testing

NEWARK, Del. — Farmers in all lines of production are feeling the financial squeeze these days, and dairy farmers are no exception. To help local dairy producers make better use of on-farm feed supplies, the Delaware Cooperative Extension Service will sponsor a free forage and feed testing and ration balancing program later this month.

Testing will be done by Penn State's mobile testing van near soil conservation offices in Glasgow on Nov. 29, and in Camden/Dover on Nov. 30. The van will work from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. each day, or longer if necessary. University of Delaware Extension dairy specialist George Haenlein and county Extension agents will be on hand to help check in samples and interpret results.

"We want to give farmers an opportunity to maximize their resources," Haenlein says. "Instead of guessing what they have in their silos or hay mounds in terms of energy, protein and other feed components when they calculate daily rations, we want them to know exactly what nutrients must be made up with purchased feeds." Results of last year's tests showed samples varied widely in nutritive values, pH and fiber content.

By testing their forage, farmers can adjust the amount of purchased feed so as to maximize nutrients for their herds. High-yielding cows milking 80 to 90 pounds a day need large amounts of concentrated energy as well as protein, calcium and fiber.

Most farm-grown feeds are now in storage, including late-cut hay and perhaps late-cut soybeans baled for hay where double-crop beans didn't set enough to warrant combining. With the start of winter feeding, it will pay farmers to find out just what they're giving their cows, Haenlein says. "If you don't know what's in that silage and hay, you may either shortchange your herd or waste money in unnecessary feed supplements."

Analysis also will show how well an individual is managing silage and hay crops, the specialist says. "If you harvested your second crop cereal grain forages too late, you may have nothing but straw. Corn silage harvested too soon won't give you full energy value." He considers the visit of the mobile testing unit an educational opportunity because it can show farmers where they can save and where they must spend.

Over 100 forage and feed samples were analyzed when the van visited Delaware last year. Haenlein considers this an excellent response for a first-time effort, but hopes many more people avail themselves of the service this year. Because of its educational nature, he encourages not only farmers but also FFA and 4-H members with livestock or forage projects to participate in the testing program.

The van will be operated by Penn State technicians as well as the plant scientist who pioneered the testing system. Haenlein calls the test revolutionary in speeding the process of forage testing through infrared analysis of dry matter. Results are fed into a computer and emerge as a printed report that farmers can use immediately.

Alfalfa haylage, brewers grain, small grain haylage, corn silage, hay (alfalfa, grass and legume mixes and other hays), even grains can be tested. Depending on the type, samples will be analyzed for protein, fiber, energy, calcium, phosphorus, magnesium, potassium, dry matter and pH.

Once farmers know the value of their forage, they can work with feed dealers or Haenlein to build a balanced supplementary ration.

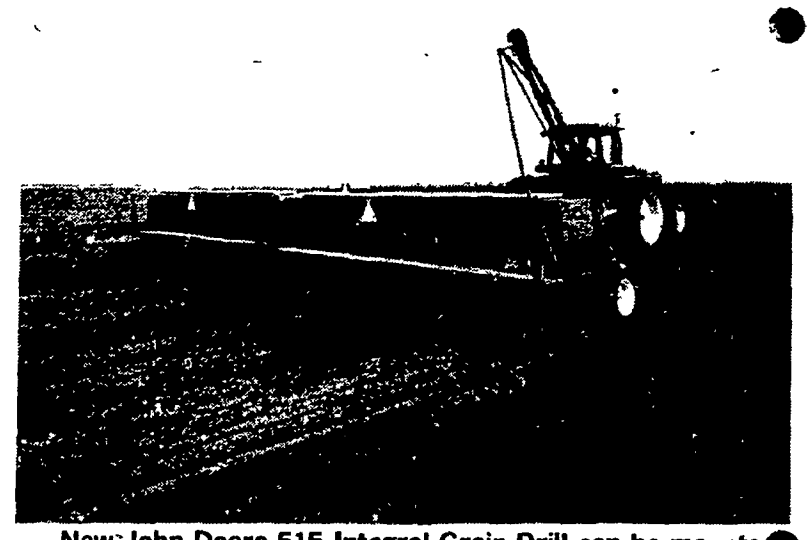
Deere introduces new grain drill

MOLINE, Il. — John Deere has introduced a new 15-foot wide integral grain drill, the model 515, for seeding a large variety of small grain crops or soybeans in 7-, 8-, or 10-inch row spacings. A Tru-Vee opener attachment is available on the 10-inch row spacing models to provide improved seeding depth control.

Since it is 3-point hitch mounted, the 515 will be most popular with growers who seek maneuverability and easy tractor hookup in a drill. For those growers who prefer a wider-working drill arrangement and narrow transport width, a companion new product, the 530 Transport Hitch, allows two 515 drills to be mounted side by side for field work as a pull-type unit, then fold to a narrow 15-foot, 6-inch transport width. The 530 Transport Hitch uses hydraulics to allow the operator to fold the assembly from field to transport position without leaving the tractor seat. Single or dual row marker attachments are available for use with the 530 Transport Hitch.

515 Grain Drills will be available with regular single disk, semi-deep single disk, or double disk openers. Single disk openers may be all right-hand or right-hand and left-hand configurations. Double disk openers may be of either the straight line or zig-zag type. Either fluted or double-run feed cups are available. Various types of press wheels are also available as optional equipment for the 515 Drill.

A screw crank adjustment provides a convenient method to change down pressure as field conditions vary. Individual openers sprong adjustment is also provided.



New John Deere 515 Integral Grain Drill can be mounted on the tractor's 3-point hitch, or (as shown) mounted in tandem with a second 515, to double seeding width, by use of a 530 Transport Hitch.

Lehigh Valley Farmers report sales increase

LANSDALE — Milk producers who are members of Lehigh Valley Farmers Cooperative can expect further payments of a patronage dividend at the end of the year. This good news was announced last week at a meeting in New Holland.

Officials of the Lansdale-based dairy cooperative reported to members at an annual district meeting in the New Holland Fire Hall that milk sales and operating margins for the first eight months of the year were significantly ahead of last year.

William Stout, vice president and general manager of Lehigh Valley Farmers, told Lancaster County members that the cooperative had sold over 484 million pounds of milk in the period. The milk was sold for $66 million and represented an increase of $10 million.

"All of this milk," Stout said, "was shipped to Atlantic Processing, Inc., the federation of cooperatives to which Lehigh belongs. Because API is having a good year, so are we. After API declared a dividend and made a partial or advance payment in September, we distributed $200,000 to our members. At our current level of profitability, we will pay out more than that amount at the end of the year."

President Alpheus L. Ruth reported that Lehigh's equity in the API federation had reached $1.5 million. "We're delighted with API's growth and our increasing ownership in the business. API still needs more milk to keep its three plants operating, so we have to increase our membership... and we're going to be aggressive about it."

The Lehigh president compared this situation with the national scene and the dairy surplus that is plaguing the nation. He voiced his organization's opposition to government plans to deduct funds from farmer's milk checks to support the marketing of surplus dairy products.

Ruth said, "We will work with the National Milk Producer's Federation and other cooperative groups and our legislators to emphasize programs that increase the demand for dairy products, instead of this highly negative approach."

Ruth and Stout also expressed concern about proposals to extend the areas of federal government control of milk marketing in Pennsylvania. General Manager Stout said, "We believe this is not in the best interest of Lehigh Valley Farmers, or of Atlantic Processing, or of any of its other member cooperatives."

The group also heard a review of advertising and marketing programs of Lehigh Valley Farms products, which are partially funded by the farmers. Continued support of these programs was solicited. The New Holland meeting was one of nine annual district meetings being held by Lehigh Valley Farmers throughout the state.

Agway elects 2 directors at meeting

SYRACUSE — One new member from Pennsylvania was elected to the board of directors of Agway, Inc. and another was re-elected at the 18th annual meeting Oct. 28-29 in Syracuse.

Christian F. Wolff Jr., Millville, has been elected to the 18-member board of directors. He was chosen for a three-year term.

Lewis R. Barden, Mansfield, who has served on the Agway Board since 1967, had previously announced his plans not to seek re-election.

Wolff, who purchased his Pen-Col Farms in 1951, has operated in partnership with his son, Dennis, since 1971. They milk 115 registered Holsteins and farm 550 acres. Principal crops include alfalfa and corn. [illegible] been an Wolff has been an Agway member throughout his farming career. He is chairman of the Eyers Grove Agway Committee, a member of the Pennsylvania Farmers Associations, Keystone Milk Marketing Council, and is a past director of the NEPA Bull Stud and chairman of sire selection.

Active in many other groups, Wolff has been a 4-H leader, member of DHIA County Extension, and his church.

A member of the Agway Boar[illegible] since 1973, he serves on the Executive, Planning and Farm & Home Committees.

He is also a member of the board of directors of Curtice-Burns Inc. and serves as chairman of the Finance Committee.

Heffner and his family operate the 500-acre Jersey Acres Farm Inc., maintaining a dairy herd of 60 registered Jerseys and 50 young stock. He raises forage crops, grains, and fruit. He and his wife, Annie, operate a road-side market at the farm.

Heffner holds a bachelor of science degree in agricultural education from Penn State and a master of science degree in agriculture economics from the University of Delaware.

Washington, D.C. — The Foreign Agriculture service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture reported the following recent developments in world agriculture and trade:

Grain and Feed

Backed by heavy subsidies, Greek durum sales to Noth Africa picked up last week, as expected. Algeria purchased 125,000 metric tons and Tunisia took 45,000 tons (in addition to 40,000 from the United States). These are the first purchases from 1982 crop Greek durum, of which as much as 400,000 tons will be surplus for export. The amount sold represents a major share of North Africa's expected purchases of 1.8 million tons and constitutes significant damage to U.S. durum sales prospects, continuing a pattern that began last March.

In Canada, West Coast longshoremen remain off the job and the work stoppage to date likely has resulted in a 200,000-ton reduction in grain exports. Shipments of about 2 million tons of wheat, a near-record level, had been anticipated for October. Negotiations have resumed, however, and early next week the Canadian Parliament is expected to pass an act forcing the longshoremen back to work. The work stoppage is not expected to last more than two weeks.

Last season, Canadian grain exports were disrupted by a 12-day strike at Thunder Bay; however, the Canadians were still able to ship record levels of grain because of favorable conditions throughout the rest of the shipping season.

The Argentine Grain Board opened wheat export registrations on Sept. 20 for shipments after Nov. 1, 1982. Wheat registrations have been closed since December 1981. Thus far, trading has been slow. Exporters may be delaying action, hoping for more attractive profit margins.

To date, favorable weather has led to expectations of a large crop, which could reduce domestic prices. The wheat crop is currently forecast at 10.5 million tons, and exports for 1982/83 (December-November) are expected to reach a record 6.3 million tons. Exporters also likely are waiting for some change in Argentine economic policies that would further devalue the peso, bring about a convergence of the two-tier exchange rate system and possibly lower export taxes.

Unfavorable weather in Brazil continues to damage the wheat crop, according to the U.S. agricultural officer in Rio de Janeiro. Excessive precipitation in Rio Grande do Sul, Brazil's largest wheat producing state, has sharply reduced yields, and the crop is now expected to total only 2.1 million tons, the lowest level since 1977. Further deterioration could occur if weather does not improve.

Ecuador has eliminated the $23 million annual direct subsidy payments for wheat imports in a move to increase foreign debt repayment capability and to decrease contraband wheat exports. Consumption of bread wheat is expected to drop moderately in the next month or so and then return to fomer levels as consumers adjust to higher prices. Wheat imports are expected to remain at the 26,250-ton monthly quota rate since import purchases until January have already been made.

Spot shortages of flour, bread and wheat have arisen due to small stocks and transportation strikes. Millers are pressuring the government for increased import quotas and permission to import soft wheat. At present only Hard Red Winter wheat is imported.

Oilseeds and Products

In order to protect domestic producers, Thailand recently announced import controls on several oilseeds and oilseed products, including soybeans, copra, soybean oil and palm oil. Imports must now be approved by the Department of Foreign Tade in the Ministry of Commerce.

Permission will be granted to companies that have previously imported these products and use them as raw materials for manufacturing. Quota allocations will be designated for individual importers. Until these are completed, permission for temporary imports of soybean and palm oil will be granted on 30-day intervals. Quantities imported under the temporary system will be limited to the average monthly imports during July 1981-June 1982 and will be deducted from quota allocations of individual importers. Importers also must agree to puchase domestically produced palm oil or soybeans.

The German Democratic Republic harvested a good rapeseed crop in 1982—an estimated 312,000 tons, compared with 284,000 in 1982—according to the U.S. agricultural attache in Berlin. Most of the increase is attributed to favorable weather.

Initial prospects for the 1983 crop are less than optimal at this early stage. As a result of a drought during mid-July through the end of August, soil moisture in the GDR was very low during and after rape seeding. The planted area for the 1983 crop is expected to be near last year's level of 131,000 hectares.

Dairy, Livestock and Poultry

Because of increasing demand for beef in South Korea, the Ministry of Agriculture and Fisheries has increased the 1982 beef import quota to 53,000 tons, carcass weight equivalent, form an earlier import level of 39,000 tons. Domestic production is expected to reach 92,000 tons in 1982. The government's campaign to switch consumer preferences from beef to pork and poultry apparently has not been successful to date.

On Oct. 19, Taiwan lifted its restrictions on imports of U.S. meats, offals and bides and skins from states with recent outbreaks of vesicular stomatits. Imports of animal products can now be made from any state.

At the same time, Taiwan announced an immediate six-month ban on imports of all live animals from the United States, including cattle, deer, horses, sheep and swine. The ban includes all states, but will be waived for individuals who obtained import permits before Oct. 19. However, the imported animals must be accompanied by a health certificate stating they have been tested by the neutralization test for VS and have had a negative result. The animals will also be subject to quarantine in Taiwan.

Report tagged game

HARRISBURG — Tagged, banded or color-marked birds and animals play a major role in wildlife management, and the Game Commission asks Pennsylvanians to report marked wildlife to appropriate agencies, institutions or organizations.

Federal and state agencies, ornithologists, sportsmen, colleges, universities and others regularly mark birds and animals for various studies. The Game Commission, for example, bands ducks as part of its continuing study of waterfowl. Trapped bears are also marked in various ways to provide invaluable research data.

Information gained is a great help in on-going studies of migration, movements, reproductive success and survival of birds and animals.

Hunters can help assure the future of their sport, and the general public can contribute to scientific knowledge, by reporting band or tag numbers, and the location and date of harvesting or finding to the organization or agency listed on the tag or band.

If the person is uncertain as to what to do, all pertinent information should be given to a game protector or sent to the Division of Game Management, Pennsylvania Game Commission, P.O. Box 1567, Harrisburg, PA 17105-1567.

Alternative diesel fuels under test at Penn State UNIVERSITY PARK — Future shortages of diesel fuel, likely to occur, should interest farmers and other users of diesel engines in alternative fuels. Such fuels are now undergoing development and testing at Penn State.

The experiments indicate ethanol (ethyl alcohol) and oils from soybeans, peanuts, sunflowers, or safflowers, can be used as extenders or substitutes for diesel fuel.

"The results are encouraging and can lead to practical use of ethanol and vegetable oils in mixtures with diesel fuel," declared Kermit Q. Stephenson, agricultural engineer heading up the research in Penn State's College of Agriculture.

While the results will not solve diesel fuel shortages immediately, Stephenson and associates have had good results using undiluted (200 proof) ethanol and soybean oil in mixtures with diesel oil.

In a series of test, the Penn Staters supplied up to 30 percent of the fuel energy used by a diesel tractor from 200 proof ethanol. In other tests, a blend of soybean oil and 200 proof ethanol supplied up to 70 percent of the fuel by volume, or 58 percent of the energy, when mixed with diesel oil.

Application of the Penn State findings will depend upon costs of alternative fuels and supplies of conventional diesel oil, Stephenson pointed out. He noted that number 2 heating oil and diesel fuel are similar products. A hard winter can result in high use of heating oil and thus can contribute to temporary diesel fuel shortages and increased prices, he added.

"American farmers have a vested interest in agriculturally-based alternative fuels for diesel engines," Stephenson said, "since tractors, combines, and other farm equipment are powered mostly by diesel engines."

Both ethanol and vegetable oils are derived from farm-produced, renewable crops. Ethanol can be made from sugar crops such as sweet sorghum, sugar cane, and sugar beets — or from starch crops like corn and other grains or potatoes.

But there are problems. Vegetable oils are much higher than diesel fuel in viscosity and they contain minor non-combustible components. Both factors can cause clogging, carbon buildup, and corrosion in direct-injection diesel engines. Extra processing to remove unburnable parts and blending the oils with ethanol to adjust the viscosity to that of diesel fuel, can improve combustion and reduce or eliminate problems.

Processing ethanol to a level containing 5 to 20 percent water (190 to 160 proof) saves more energy than processing undiluted ethanol (200 proof). However, the lower proofs do not mix completely with diesel fuel.

"Since ethanol has a low cetane rating (compression ignition ability), it can not be used alone in diesel engines," Stephenson stated. "By careful metering and by vaporizing fuel grades of ethanol into a diesel engine's intake manifold — a process called fumigation — ethanol can substitute for as much as 30 percent of the diesel fuel," he added.

And he indicated that vegetable oils have cetane ratings slightly lower than diesel fuel but their viscosity is 10 times greater. These properties mean that soybean oil, for example, is combustible in a diesel engine. However, high viscosity of vegetable oils keeps them from forming the best burning mixture when injected into the combustion chamber of diesel engines designed for much less viscous diesel fuel.

When heated about 120F, mixable blends containing up to 30 percent undiluted ethanol were obtained. Blends of 40:40:20 and 30:40:30 diesel fuel, soybean oil, and undiluted ethanol were used in a six-cylinder diesel engine tractor.

No engine problems were found during 100 hours of operation on the fuel blends at Penn State. Stephenson said these relatively short-term test may not show problems accumulated over longer periods. Accordingly, continued tests are underway.

Hunters, avoid littering

HARRISBURG — An appeal to all hunters is again made by the Game Commission to make this year's hunting seasons litter-free. It will help ensure future availability of hunting lands in Pennsylvania.

Hunters have an opportunity, through the Game Commission's SPORT program, to regain the respect and confidence lost in past years through senseless littering by uncaring individuals who left behind highly-visible evidence of their presence.

Those involved in SPORT (Sportsmen Policing Our Ranks Together) pick up ammunition boxes, non-degradable plastic shell casings, bottles, cans, lunch wrappers and other debris.

A landowner finding litter, garbage or trash on his property can't be expected to permit hunting to continue. Especially upsetting are large plastic bags of household waste dropped off by urban hunters "in the country."

Littering on public property is equally distastful. This is an offense against all society and everyone has to pay to help clean up the mess.

Litter-bugs face stiff fines and possible loss of hunting licenses for leaving or depositing garbage, bottles, cartons, containers, glass, paper or other debris on lands (public or private) open to public hunting.

Lancaster holds community planning workshops

LANCASTER — Three workshops to introduce the principles and processes of planning will be conducted by the Lancaster County Planning Commission in November.

The Workshops will be held on three consecutive Tuesdays, Nov. 16, 23, and 30, beginning at 7:30 p.m. They will be in the Sixth Floor Meeting Room of the Lancaster County Courthouse, 50 North Duke Street, Lancaster.

The workshops will be beneficial to concerned citizens and to newly elected and appointed officials. As more and more persons become involved in issues directly affecting them and their communities, a further understanding of how decisions are made should be helpful.

The first session will be an introduction to planning. Discussion will focus on the Lancaster County Planning Commission and its work, local planning, and State planning.

The second session will focus on regulation of development. Both the Lancaster County Subdivision and Land Development Ordinance and local development regulation will be discussed.

The final session will be on land use, transportation, and the environment. Topics to be covered include transportation, agricultural preservation, sewer and water management, solid waste management, water and sewage facilities planning, and the gypsy moth spray program.

Those who will be attending should notify the Lancaster County Planning Commission at 717-299-8333 between 8:30 a.m. and 5:00 p.m., Monday through Friday.

HARRISBURG — Contestants from across the nation and Pennsylvania will be competing in the 1982 American Finals Rodeo this weekend at the Farm Show Complex in Harrisburg.

The nation's top 12 individuals from each rodeo division will compete for thousands of dollars in prizes in such events as bull riding, bareback and saddle bronc riding, steer wrestling, calf roping, barrel racing and team roping competition.

"This will be the highlight of the year for Pennsylvania rodeo fans," said State Agriculture Secretary Penrose Hallowell. "Several small outdoor rodeos take place in Pennsylvania during the year, but the American Finals Rodeo is the only indoor event held in the state."

The secretary went on to say that rodeos provide excellent family entertainment along with an education in rodeo skills and thrilling competition. Over 15,000 persons attended last year's rodeo.

Scores compiled by each contestant during the two shows, held at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday and 2:30 p.m. on Sunday, will be averaged to decide the top four winners in each event.

This year's Miss Rodeo Pennsylvania will present awards and prizes such as engraved saddles, gold and silver buckles, boots and hats to the winners. The all-around cowboy and all-around cowgirl will also be selected at the conclusion of the rodeo.

Ron Malcolm of Charlotte, North Carolina is the current bull riding leader, and he also leads in the race for ARA World All Around-Cowboy, with only a few thousand dollars ahead of Mile Rhineer of Willow Street, Lancaster County, a Pennsylvania team roper.

Other chapters cover construction details and recommendations for electrical power, lighting, heating, plumbing and ventilation. A very complete list recommends the tools needed for each shop function.

This booklet is available from the Hunterdon, N.J. Cooperative Extension Service office, Extension Center, R6 Box 48 of Flemington, N.J. 08822. There is a charge of $1.25 each. It is a publication of the Northeast Regional Agricultural Engineering Service. Write or call 201/788-1339 if you'd like a copy mailed.

Turkey hunters must be careful

Turkey hunting accidents are of concern to Hunter Education Coordinator James Filkosky, who says, "Almost half of those shot in mistake for game in Pennsylvania last year were thought to be turkeys.

"Some of the victims were concealed in heavy cover, wore camouflage material and were attempting to call in birds," noted Filkosky. "This method is turkey hunting at its finest, but unfortunately some hunters apparently are shooting at 'sounds' and 'movements'."

The number of turkey hunters in Pennsylvania is growing rapidly, and it's incumbent upon every hunter to be absolutely sure of his or her target before firing. If the hunter positively identifies a turkey, there is no chance a human will be shot in mistake.

Those who call turkeys would be well advised to take along a fluorescent orange hat or material, and hang it above them before starting to "talk turkey."

Nat'l Wheat Research conference describes ag research plans

BELTSVILLE, Md. — At the opening session of the recent National Wheat Research Conference here, Terry B. Kinney, Jr., administrator for USDA's Agricultural Research Service, described plans to preserve and improve America's wheat potential.

He defined a 6-point strategy for wheat, part of a larger plan to "identify and explain the main problems that confront the agricultural industry and chart the minimum courses of action that will provide the research needed for solutions." Genetic diversity is the basic working tool of the agricultural scientist who wished to design a better variety, Kinney said, adding that diversity of wheat germplasm is an absolute requisite for genetic advance.

Kinney named six high-priority programs in order of importance. He said that collection, evaluation, preservation and distribution of wheat germplasm ranks first. Germplasm — primarily in the form of seed — is the hereditary parentage for new breeds of crop plants. To start with, he said, ARS is taking inventory of small grains collections around the country while curators of these collections assess how far behind they are in germplasm grow-out programs and set priorities for the future. (Stored seed needs to be grown out and replenished every several years to maintain viable collections.)

"No single research activity can be more important to the future of wheat — or other agricultural commodities — than the collection, maintenance and dissemination of useful germplasm," he said.

The second thrust is for ARS scientists to develop new methods of modifying or improving wheat germplasm. Techniques for culturing plant cells and tissue and for recombining DNA from various strains of wheat can help scientists improve germplasm, Kinney remarked. But these techniques will not replace traditional plant breeding procedures which have been used so successfully. "New breeding methods deserve considerable attention in the next decade."

Third, germplasm enhancement is an important research function for ARS with scientists concentrating on converting "raw" germplasm into more useful breeding lines. Some existing lines in the ARS collection may have extremely useful characteristics, such as the gene conferring resistance to the disease called stem rust. ARS scientists will have to transfer such unique genes into better breeding lines, Kinney said.

Fourth, ARS scientists will concentrate on understanding basic plant growth and development processes such as photosynthesis, nitrogen uptake, and learn why some plants are more winterhardy or drought-tolerant than others. With a better understanding of these processes, plant breeders "can do a better job of manipulating the wheat plant's genetic system," Kinney noted.

Fifth, ARS scientists will work to understand how plants resist, or at least tolerate, the attacks of diseases and insects. "Resistance has so far been the most effective way to protect plants from pests," Kinney said.

Finally, ARS scientists will continue to work on improving cultural and management practices toward better farming systems.

Kinney said that the above areas of research are central to the ARS mission. Others, however, may be cut or reorganized. Because the current ARS budget of about $450 million has approximately the same purchasing power as the 1966 budget, "clearly, there are limits to the kinds and numbers of problems that can be undertaken within 1966 budget levels."

Kinney acknowledged that ARS has been criticized recently for failure to do long-range planning and to coordinate its own and Federal-State programs. The current "strategic plans" are directed toward overcoming the problems. "We must address our critics," he said. "If they are wrong, we will tell them why they are wrong. If they are right, we'll respond, and we'll respond rapidly."

Penn State's Mortensen wins scholarship to Nigeria

UNIVERSITY PARK — James H. Mortensen of Penn State has been awarded a Fulbright grant to assist in developing an agricultural and extension education program at the new Federal University of Technology in Yola, Nigeria (West Africa).

Mortensen is one of 800 Americans being sent abroad for the 1982-83 academic year under the Fulbright exchange program. Established in 1946 under legislation introduced by former Senator J. William Fulbright of Arkansas, the program is designed "to increase mutual understanding between the people of the United States and the people of other countries."

James H. Mortensen

At Penn State, Mortensen is in charge of the instructional program for future teachers of vocational agriculture. Teaching in the Department of Agricultural and Extension Education, he developed the first course in agricultural education to be taught on Penn State's Commonwealth Campuses. His research has supported his instructional efforts. He conducted or supervised research that identified the agricultural competencies needed by high school teachers of agriculture.

Fulbright scholarships are awarded to graduate students in American colleges, high school teachers, and college professors to study, teach, lecture, and conduct research abroad. The scholarships bring froeign nationals to the United States for similar activities here.

Mortensen earned degrees at North Dakota State University, Colorado State University, and Penn State. He served as national secretary of the American Association of Teacher Educators in Agriculture farm 1978 to 1980. He was regional editor of the periodical, "Agricultural Education," for four years. Mortensen leaves for Nigeria in early November and will return in July.

In 35 years, over 45,000 Fulbright scholars from the U.S. have gone to some 100 nations. Over 85,000 foreigners have studied and taught in this country.

Scholarships are awarded through open competition with final selections made by the presidentially-appointed Board of Foreign Scholarships in the Fulbright program. Financing and administration come largely from the U.S. International Communication Agency, Department of State. Twenty-four foreign governments also share in funding the exchanges.

Farm-City Week features 'Partners in Progress'

LANCASTER — Pennsylvania's 26th observance of Farm-City Week - scheduled for November 19-25 - will emphasize the concern for improving our quality of life and recognize the responsibilities which are shared by both farm and urban residents, according to Roy Christman, Farm-City week chairman.

The 1982 celebration will focus on the fact that understanding the problems of rural and urban communities is everyone's concern.

Farm-City Week observances were organized on a national scale 28 years ago "to bring about a better understanding between rural and urban segments of society, thus making for a stronger America."

The need for this understanding, Christman emphasizes, is greater today than at any time in the past.

Pennsylvania is linking its observance this year to the theme, "Partners in Progress, You Can't Have One Without the Other." County committees are organized throughout the state to plan programs in cities, towns and rural areas.

"Few persons realize the truly close partnership that exists between our rural and urban communities," Christman says, "or how greatly our economy depends on the mutual cooperation of rural and urban Pennsylvania."

Nearly 23 percent of the U.S. labor force is employed in farming and agricultural related businesses. Farm production will use about 3.3 million workers in 1982 — around 3 percent of the national labor force and 14 percent of all workers required by the food and fiber system.

It took about 103 million barrels of oil to produce and ship our farm exports in 1980. But export earnings were enough to pay for 986 million barrels, more than half our oil imports.

About one-third of all cultivated U.S. cropland is used to produce raw commodities for export. Agricultural exports brought in $44 billion in 1981. Imports of agricultural products, such as coffee, meat, sugar and fruits and vegetables amounted to $17 billion. The difference between exports and imports was $27 billion, which helped offset our nonagricultural trade deficit of $60 billion.

Berks Co. Observance

Plans for the Berks County observance of Farm-City Week are virtually complete, according to Christman.

In Berks County, Farm-City Week will begin with a kick-off in Penn's Square, at noon, Nov. 16. Subsequent activities will include one-on-one tours of businessmen to farms Nov. 17, and free farm tours Nov. 20-21.

This will be the twenty-eighth annual observance of Farm-City week, and ninth annual farm tours in Berks.

Last year's observance, according to final reports received at national headquarters, involved the active participation of more than 18,000 communities in the U.S. and Canada.

Lebanon Co. Observance

Dennis Grumbine, chairman of the Lebanon Valley Chamber of Commerce's Farm City Week, announced final plans for this year's recognition in Lebanon County, scheduled one week earlier, Nov. 12 to 18.

"Our whole effort", states Grumbine, "is to bring together the farming and business communities and to indicate to the general public that agriculture contributes quite extensively to the economy of Lebanon County."

The Lebanon Co. Farm City Week program was judged the best in Pennsylvania for 1981.

Monday, Nov. 15 will see two activities. The first, is a breakfast with the news media to detail the economic impact agriculture has on Lebanon County and the country. This will be at 9 a.m. at the Country House Restaurant.

The second, will be a senior citizens tour of several farms. The senior citizens from Grace Brethren Church will visit the David Brandt Dairy Farm, the Lloyd Sensenig Hog and Beef Farm and the Walter Heistand Beef Farm.

Tuesday, the farmers learn how to run a business by touring Lebanon Valley National Bank and the Lebanon Packaging Corporation.

Wednesday will see the business community realizing the complexities of running a farm by touring the Claude Olstein Poultry Farm, the Dale Hostetter Dairy Farm and the Jay Blatt Hog Farm.

Thursday, Nov. 18 will conclude the 1982 Farm City Week. The annual banquet will be held at 7 p.m. at the Prescott Firehall. At this time the job exchange participants will describe their experiences. This years participants include Kenneth Longenecker, of H & H Tack Shop; Randy Tice, of Lebanon Plumbing Supply; Joseph McDonald, of Moores Building Supply and farmers are Dean Patches; Donald Hoffer; and Victor Zeigler. Tickets for this banquet can be obatined by calling the Lebanon Valley Chamber of Commerce Offices.

DENVER, Colo. - Limousin entries for the 1982 American Royal open cattle show have topped all previous years. The North American Limousin Foundation reports a total of 152 entries in this year's Kansas City show, compared to 127 last year.

Charley McPeak, Stillwater, Okla., will judge the regional open show Nov. 15. The Limousin junior heifer show will be held Nov. 14.

Directly on the heels of the American Royal is the North American International Livestock Exposition in Louisville, Ky.

The Kentucky National Limousin Show and Sale will be held Nov. 18, and the regional open show is scheduled for Nov. 19.

Update on the poultry industry

By Herb Jordan

Penn State Extension Poultry Specialist

How's your fire attitude?

At a recent Broiler Housing Conference in Delaware, Ron Jester, Extension safety specialist from Delaware, reviewed many important items concerning fire safety in broiler houses. Everyone who is involved with the broiler industry has a stake in reducing fire risks.

Developing an attitude of minimizing the potential for fire is the most important step. Growers, servicemen, equipment installers and builders all play a role in reducing the potential for a fire.

The prime culprit in most broiler houses is dust.

- Dust is dangerous!!!
- Dust is combustible
- Dust spreads fire rapidly.
- Dust accumulations provide the kindlings to ignite other burnable material.

Electricity ignites

A large percentage of broiler house fires are caused by electrical problems. Dust-covered, overheated motors, sparks from bad switches, thermostats, motors or other electrical apparatus might be all that it takes to start a layer of dust burning.

Broiler houses are often lined with exposed, plastic-type insulation. Fire in this material can spread rapidly and generates excessive smoke and fumes. Fires in long open buildings with fans that automatically come on to fan them are difficult to stop once they start.

As always the best defense is a good defense. Stop the fire before it starts — prevent it.

There are many steps that can be taken to reduce the possibility of fire. Some are best done during construction or major renovation. Most can be done every day.

* Housekeeping - don't allow dust or other flammable materials such as bags, boxes, etc. to accumulate.
* Keep all electrical equipment in good repair. Be sure doors and covers are closed. Leave burned out light bulbs in unused light sockets to keep out dust, moisture, and insects.
* Label electrical panels and switches so you can shut off overheated or sparking equipment quickly.
* Brooders should have safety chains to prevent them falling into dry litter.
* Be sure heat lamps are adequately guarded and their electric cords protected.
* Electrical wiring should be protected from damage by birds and equipment. Wires dangling in the air and rubbing on equipment can soon become frayed.
* Locate electrical components and switch panels in a separate dust free room when possible.
* Wire all electrical panels and devices from the bottom.
* Use only dust tight electrical equipment. Totally enclosed motors should be used on all equipment.
* Have properly sized and serviced fire extinguishers at critical locations.
* Buildings with long attics should have firestops or walls installed periodically through the attic to prevent rapid spread of fire.
* Do not use exposed flammable insulations.
* When several houses are constructed leave at least 50 feet of fire space between them.
* Get to know your fire department. Ask if they can send someone out to go through your building with you. They can help you eliminate fire hazards. It will also help them become more familiar with broiler houses.
* Post the fire department's phone number and directions to your farm by all telephones.

More information on insulation fires is contained in Agricultural Engineering Fact Sheet Safety-20 "Insulation Fire Hazards on Farms." This publication is available through the Agricultural Engineering Extension Office, 204 Agricultural Engineering Building, University Park, PA 16802.

Md. ag pesticide meeting Dec. 2

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — The twenty-ninth annual Maryland Agricultural Pesticide Conference is scheduled Dec. 2 at the Wicomico Youth and Civic Center in Salisbury.

That's about seven weeks earlier than the date for most of the preceding 28 meetings, reports Ronald L. Ritter, Extension weed control specialist and assistant professor of agronomy at the University of Maryland in College Park. Ritter is serving as conference chairman for the third successive year.

He explained that the earlier date was set both to lessen the chance for snowstorm interference and to provide those who attend with timely information on agrichemical recommendations before they place their early-winter orders for delivery next spring.

Theme for the morning session at next month's pesticide conference will be "Applicator and Environmental Safety." The afternoon theme will be "New Sprayer Technology."

Morning speakers and their topics will include:

"Emergency Spill Response and Recycling Usable Waste Materials" — Philip E. Catron of Damascus, Mid-Atlantic regional agronomist for ChemLawn Corporation, headquartered at Westminister;

"Function of the Maryland Poison Control Center and How It Can Help Maryland Agriculture" — Jacqueline Lucy, coordinator of education and communications, MPCC, Baltimore;

"Triazine Concentrations in the Wye River" - Alan W. Taylor and Dwight E. Glotfelty, both research chemists with the Agricultural and Environmental Quality Institute at the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Agricultural Research Center in Beltsville.

"Application Accuracy" - film by DuPont Agrichemicals.

"Using Pesticides in Irrigation" - Dante M. Marini of Wilmington, Del., Eastern regional sales representative for the agricultural chemical division of Stauffer Chemical Company.

"A Look at Old and New Application Techniques" - Ronald L. Ritter, Extension weed control specialist at the University of Maryland.

"New Sprayer Technology" - Robert W. Cohill, president of Agrotec Services, Inc., at Salisbury. Cohill's presentation will include information on hydraulic booms and new foam markers.

Registration for the daylong educational meeting will get underway at 8:30 a.m. with coffee and doughnuts. The program will run from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., with a time-out for lunch from 11:30 to 1. A $5 registration fee will include the cost of a chicken barbecue lunch.

The conference is intended for county Extension agents as well as agri-chemical custom applicators, dealers, distributors and sales representatives. Plant protection workers from the state Department of Agriculture will be on hand. Other interested persons - especially farmers - are also welcome.

Since their inception in 1955, the pesticide meetings have been conducted each year by Cooperative Extension Service specialists from the University of Maryland. The state Department of Agriculture has been a cooperating agency since 1973.

Next month's pesticide conference marks the second in a return to the one-day, one-location format which featured its early years. It also carries on a recent policy of rotating the location each year between Maryland's western side of the Chesapeake Bay and the Eastern Shore.

As in most past years, the meeting will serve as the initial distribution point for the annual edition of Maryland Extension Bulletin 237, Pest Control pesticide Recommendations for Field Crops. It is also a qualifying meeting for recertification by custom applicators. No advance registration is required. About 225 persons are expected.

Nat'l wool, pelt symposium Nov. 15-18

DENVER, Colo. — Sheep producers, tanners, wool buyers, mill personnel and sheep industry experts will participate in the National Wool and Pelt Symposium next week at the Sheraton-Airport, Denver. Sponsored by the American Sheep Producers Council and Sheep Industry Development Inc., the meeting is the first step toward solving the problems American sheep producers have with their wool and pelt products.

In three days of meetings and discussions, speakers will cover such topics as the state of the industry, the future of wool as a viable commodity, ways to improve the value of American wool and pelts, and production and marketing techniques for the two products. Speakers include sheep specialists, wool buyers from mills and cooperative warehouses, and pelt experts from the packer and tanner levels.

Events' coordinator, George Ahlschwede, described the situation which led to the Symposium, "We have problems with marketing our medium-grade wools, and with contamination in the pelts. The pelt contamination is affecting the value of the pelts in the marketplace. Since both are valuable commodities to the sheep producer, it is important to correct those problems.

Farm Talk

Jerry Webb

Cryts, a farming celebrity

The name Wayne Crysts doesn't mean much to the typical newspaper reader here in the urbanized east. But in farm country, he's a celebrity. His daily activities are chronicled in newspapers, and on television and radio. He signs autographs wherever he goes, and letters pour into his southeast Missouri farm home by the hundreds — many of them stuffed with money. He's in demand for speeches all across the country and he's a frequent talk show guest. All of this because he took a stand for what he believed was right.

Cryts' notoriety began back in 1981 when he defied the federal government and raided a bankrupt grain elevator. In some people's minds, that was a terrible thing to do. He defied the federal government and took something the government said didn't belong to him. But there's another side to the story because as he sees it, he was taking back what was rightfully his. Around that point have developed all kinds of problems for the young Missouri farmer, including a jail term, a $278,000 legal judgment, a $1,500 a day fine, and his own 35 million dollar lawsuit.

Prior to the Great Soybean Raid of 1981, Wayne Cryts was just another Missouri farmer. He grew soybeans on the Stoddard County farm that had been in the family for well over 100 years. He belonged to the American Agriculture Movement and went on the tractorcade to Washington in 1979, but other than that had done very little to draw attention to himself or his beliefs.

Then a grain elevator went bankrupt — an elevator that just happened to be holding a year's worth of Cryts' soybeans. As part of the bankruptcy process, the elevator was padlocked, which meant his crop would stay there and become part of the bankruptcy proceedings. He still owned the beans, they just happened to be in the wrong place at the wrong time — stored in that elevator that declared bankruptcy. Be federal law that meant they were part of the problem and would remain there until the bankruptcy mess was sorted out and all creditors dealt with.

But Cryts didn't see it that way. He saw it as a year's worth of work for him and his family. He saw it as income that he needed — something that was his that was simply stored at an elevator that had gone out of business. This mild-mannered Missourian decided it was time to take a stand. And so, gathering up a few neighbors and a few farm trucks, they went to the elevator and took what was his. Defying federal marshalls he went in, broke the locks, and unloaded 32,000 bushels of soybeans.

They were his beans, there's no question about that. He had receipts to prove that he had stored 32,000 bushels of soybeans at that particular elevator. But the bankruptcy laws say that everything on the property at the time bankruptcy is declared becomes a part of the bankruptcy process, and theoretically could be used to settle the judgment against the elevator. That could mean a farmer who stored there would just be out of luck.

It happens all the time. Grain elevators go broke. An owner simply padlocks the door and leaves town, and by the time farmers realize what has happened, bankruptcy proceedings have been filed, the federal government is involved, and they've lost everything that was stored there.

But Cryts decided that wasn't going to happen. He took a stand and he's paid a pretty heavy price, and it's not over yet. So far, the courts have ruled against him on several occasions. He was jailed for a month for failing to tell the courts who helped him remove the soybeans. He's had a $278,000 judgment leveled against him for taking back his own soybeans, and he's now being fined $1,500 a day because he refuses to pay the judgment. He's spend $75,000 in legal fees and has been under unbearable pressure over these many months because of his actions.

Cryts is convinced that he will win eventually, and supporters around the country feel that way also. Each day the mail brings messages and prayers from those who stand with him, and money — upwards of $100,000 from those willing to share the financial burden of his stand.

What was he thinking when he risked his future, the farm that has been in his family for generations, the security and well-being of his wife and children over a few thousand bushels of soybeans?

"I couldn't live with letting a bunch of lawyers take the soybeans that represent a year of my family's hard work," he told a reporter. "On the other hand, I can live with the penalties for my actions."

What kind of a man is Wayne Cryts? Joe Dan Boyd of Farm Journal magazine describes him this way: "Wear and worry have combined to etch a single deep crevice between the eyebrows. A ruggedly handsome face reflects daily battle with 35 years of wind and sun. His deep voice is both sincere and commanding, softened only by the gentle brown eyes of the family man who seems so in touch with himself. A robust 190-pounder, he stands an inch or two under six feet, in brown cowboy boots and tooled leather belt that dramatize jeans and western cut shirt."

Cryts is a family man who has spent his entire life on the land he now farms. He attended a one-room school, joined the Masons when he was 21, and was considered a loner.

As he puts it, "I farmed my crops, loved my wife and two kids, honored my parents, worshiped God, paid my taxes, and voted for people to represent me in government. I thought that being correct would assure right on my side."

Until the soybean raid, he was just another farmer. But now, despite his own wishes he's a folk hero to thousands of farmers who identify with his problem. He's an average citizen who finally drew the line and said that's enough. He stood up to the government because he believed he was right and he's willing to suffer the consequences.

Where this saga will end is anybody's guess. I can't help feeling that the rightness of his position will eventually win out and he will be exonerated. In fact, the laws will probably be changed to prevent this from happening again. After all, why should a farmer lose his property simply because it's being stored in an elevator that goes bankrupt?

Besides exoneration, and perhaps a change in the law, what will be Cryts' reward for all this effort, for the unbearable pressure, for the months of stress, the legal expenses and all the rest?

Who knows? There's talk about a movie or a TV documentary, and no doubt he can spend a lot of time and make some money on the agricultural banquet circuit over the next several months.

And then there's the lawsuit. He recently filed his own 35 million dollar suit just in case things don't work out too well for him. That will still have to be unravelled.

USDA scientists take stress tests in swine

CLAY CENTER, Neb. — Off and on the farm, people have theorized for years about whether modern methods of raising livestock make farm animals unhappy.

So far, only the animals know for sure.

Now, people may find out how some animals feel through a study by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Agricultural Research Service. A team of the research agency's scientists is going directly to pigs and asking the animals how they like or dislike life in gestation stalls and farrowing crates.

Does technology impose unreasonable stress on pigs? Are the animals comfortable? Miserable? Somewhere in between? Do animals, in fact, answer these questions day in and day out in the way they behave?

Hahn and his colleagues are trying to avoid the biases and guesses that often color opinions on the subject.

What the research team is looking for is objective data that can identify signs of stress and ways to measure the responses of animals to potentially stressful environments. Without such information, Hahn said, "Its like you and I arguing religion and politics."

Seeking measurable answers with Hahn are agricultural engineer John A. Nienaber and physiologists Rita C. Manek and Ronald K. Christenson and environmental physiologist B. Ann Becker.

To get the pig's point of view, the scientists set up cameras to record what the animals do at 10-minute intervals. Special note is taken when the pigs exhibit some of the nervous behavior that often concerns people interested in the welfare of animals.

One example: You might decide that pigs are frustrated by confinement because they bite the bars on the side of the pen. This conclusion could be right; it also could be wrong, for their are parallel patterns of behavior by pigs running free in the fields.

Clues to actual stress may be found by matching up behavioral responses to confinement with physiological responses in the swine. Becker is measuring levels of hormones such as cortisol and prolactin that may be released into the bloodstream in response to stress.

"Through the measurements, we want the animal to tell us whether it's happy or not — whether it's comfortable or not," Becker said. "Not what I think or what you think is best. We think differently. Everybody does."

By recording the responses of sows and gilts, the scientists expect to come up with facts on which to base management decisions that take into account the well being of farm animals as well as efficient meat production.

What researchers learn from this study can be combined with findings from other studies to help scientists better understand the physiology and psychology of animals, and perhaps of humans. One case in point is a problem called "behavioral anestrus," whch causes breeding failures in many sows and gilts.

To help interpret the research results, the scientists are trying to determine benchmark levels of hormones in extensively studied laboratory animals that can be compared with the hormone levels in confined animals. Several classical stressors were applied in the preliminary phase of the study.

Benchmark stressors were exposure to 100-F temperature for six hours at a time, restraining the animals for one to two hours to the extent they could not get up and turn around, and six minutes of milk electrical pulsing stimulation.

For comparison of stresses in farm production situations with the classical stresses, the scientists have placed some animals in individual pens measuring about 4 by 6 feet. Other animals have been tethered, a European restraining practice that has gained some acceptance in this country.

Early next year, the scientists expect to reveal some results of the studies.

"We certainly don't profess that we're going to have all the answers at the end of the studies," Hahn said, "but we will know a lot more about the situation with confined sows and gilts than we do now."

Chester DHIA elects directors

By Susan B. Williams

GUTHRIESVILLE—More than 300 members of the Chester County Dairy Herd Improvemnt Association met last Thursday for their annual meeting. The meeting, preceded by a ham dinner, was held at the East Brandywine Fire House. Richard Hoopes, president of the Board of Directors of D.H.I.A., presided.

Business conducted at the meeting included the election of new directors and the presentations of merit awards for herd production. Two county agricultural agents commented, as did Chester Dairy Princess Amy Elliot.

New directors elected for three-year terms are Harold Bare and Tim Kauffman, both of Atglen, and David Weaver of Coatesville.

Owners of dairy herds producing more than 700 pounds of butterfat average during the past year were awarded ribbons and plaques. Honored were the following: Melvin Stoltzfus of Melwood Farm, Cochranville with a herd of 36 cows producing an average 850 pounds butterfat; John S. Stoltzfus, Atglen with 72 cows producing 794 pounds fat; Androssan Farms, Villanova with 113 cows and a 777 pound fat average; Alvin Stoltzfus, Dunwood Farm of Oxford with 52 cows and a 773 average; Paul King of Cochranville with 82 cows and a 766 average; Robert E. Pepple of Oxford with 64 cows and a 760 average; H. and R. Mason of Nottingham with 114 cows and a 755 average; George P. Lamborn of Nottingham with 38 cows and a 736 average; Nelson Stoltzfus of Willowland Farm of Atglen with 60 cows and a 735 average; John M. Umble and Sons of Atglen with 44 cows and a 730 average; and Jefferson D. Yoder of Elverson with 64 cows and a 701 average.

Tom Dowling, a Virginia native and the new Chester County dairy agent, stated that he is a resource agent for the farmers. He stressed that he "solicits support and patience from the farmers" as he is getting adjusted. Dowling said he has "a lot to learn about dairy farmers in this area."

County agent Bob Solomon was hired to work on farmland preservation, an issue of concern to many Chester countians. "I'm not satisfied with the law," he said, referring to Act 43, legislation introduced by Noah Wenger, newly-elected state senator for the western area of Chester County. Act 43 would allow farmers to establish agricultural districts. Solomon maintained that "the act is not very strong" and that the only viable way to preserve farmland is to make farming profitable.

On their eveing out, the farmers were entertained by Grace Miller, a retired school librarian, who portrays "Tillie Hennershitz of Yummerdale". In "dutch" humor, Miller commented on many aspects of our society. She acknowledged the presence of Art Hershey, newly-elected representative of the 13th legislative district, quipping, "It's not so hard to be a politician here. Why in Africa you have to shoot a rhinoceros. Here all you have to do is shoot the bull." When asked her age, Miller replied, "I tell them I'm 29 on the Celcius scale."

HARRISBURG — Small game hunters are advised the Pennsylvania Game Commission will again conduct a survey this winter to determine hunting patterns and develop harvest data from the 1982-83 hunting seasons.

Following the extended small game season in late December and early January, the Game Commission will send questionnaires to about 40,000 hunters, asking them for information on areas where small game species were hunted and the number of each species harvested.

The Game Commission suggests hunters keep a written record or some sort of hunting diary during the regular and extended seasons. Should a hunter receive a survey form, it will be much easier to complete, and results will be far more accurate than if sportsmen try to rely on memory for desired harvest information.

Brockett's Ag Advice

By John E. Brockett
Farm Management Agent
Lewistown Extension Office

Most farmers produce crops without regard for cost or returns. It's true.

How many of you know for sure how many bushels of grain or tons of forage you produced this year?

Why can some farmers provide adequate feed for a cow producing 16,000 pounds of milk per year on three acres, while others with the same soil require five or more?

Many farmers are spending far too much to produce their home-raised feed. Why? Some of the reasons are waste (as much as 35 percent), lack of planning (hay stand with no hay crop), poor use of fertilizer (excess of one ingredient and lack of another), inadequate or uneconomical use of lime, excessive use of machinery, and poor management of time.

Planning

Now is the time to be planning next year's crop program — not next April.

Which hay strips are worth saving? Dollars spend on maintenance lime and fertilizer will yield a quicker return than dollars spent on new stands.

Will haylage fit your program? In most years it is a lot easier to make first crop hay into haylage. The end result may easily be as much as one ton of hay equivalent per acre increase in yield. Furthermore most of the hay or haylage produced will be of higher quality.

What is the most economical way to feed your home raised feed? A forage test would be a good starter. What is the fiber and protein level of hay and corn sialge? Plan now on making the best possible use of your winter's feed supply.

Pest control

Perhaps this is part of planning. What weeds and insects were problems in 1982? What will control them in 1983?

Machinery

Good organization can save fuel, and wear and tear on machinery. Carry replacement bolts, shear pins, etc with you plus a well supplied tool kit. Fix the minor problems in the field rather than run two more rounds, hoping to get done, only to find that the minor problem because a major one.

Record

Record your observations on yields, past problems, field use for 1983, and practices you want to do this fall. Use a pocket sized spiral ring notebook.

Fertilizer and lime

Fertilize for most economical crop yields, use soil testing as a routine management practice, and use the lease cost fertilizer on a per unit of desired nutrient basis. The plant doesn't know whether that nutrient was liquid or dry or cost you ten cents or ten dollars per pound.

USDA issues final "regs" for treating garbage fed to swine

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The U.S. Department of Agriculture has issued minimum standards for the treatment of food waste to be fed to swine, a U.S. Department of agriculture veterinarian reports.

John Atwell, deputy administrator of USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, said the final regulations, which become effective Jan. 1, 1983, implement of Swine Health Protection Act.

"The law and regulations are designed to prevent the introduction and spread of domestic and foreign animal diseases through the feeding of raw or improperly treated food waste to swine," Atwell said. "Foreign diseases such as hog cholera, African swine fever, foot-and-mouth disease or swine vesicular disease are real threats to the swine industry."

The regulations prohibit the feeding of garbage to swine unless heat treated at a licensed facility. Treatment consists of boiling food waste for at least 30 minutes. Applicants for a license will have to demonstrate that their premises, facilities and equipment comply with the regulations. Facilities will have to be constructed to prevent access of swine to garbage handling and treating areas. The material will have to be covered until treated. The regulations also spell out how licenses can be suspended or revoked.

Atwell said nothing in the federal law or regulations prohibits a state from having more stringent requirements. Currently, 16 states specifically prohibit the feeding of garbage to swine. They are: Alabama, Delaware, Georgia, Idaho, Illinois, Iowa, Louisiana, Maryland, Mississippi, Nebraksa, New York, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Virginia and Wisconsin.

In the 34 states and Puerto Rico that allow the feeding of properly treated food waste, state and/or federal inspectors inspect facilities, Atwell said. Under the Swine Health Protection Act, states have primary responsibility for enforcement. USDA and state officials usually have a cooperative agreement that coordinates the administration and enforcement of regulations.

Garbage is defined as all waste material derived from or associated with the meat of any animal, including fish and poultry, resulting from the handling of preparation of food. Food waste from ordinary household operations fed to swine on the same premises is exempt.

The final regulations are essentially the same as the proposal published in April, Atwell said.

"No quick fixes," Andersen tells Nat'l Grange delegates

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — "There are no quick fixes for improving agriculture producers' income," said Edward Andersen, Master of the National Grange, in an address before delegates attending the Grange's annual convention here this week.

Andersen said that if Grange policies and recommendations had been fully incorporated into the current farm program enacted last year, net farm income would be considerably improved today.

The farm leader cited three major areas which the Grange feels should be part of any farm program: a three-year grain reserve program to help level the marketing of major grain commodities, and adequate acreage reduction program for wheat, feed grains, rice and cotton and a dairy program which includes a two-price system enabling each producer to receive a basic price for his share of the total national market.

Andersen further stated, "It hardly seems possible that the Farm Credit System, a program authorized by Congress and one that has surpassed everyone's highest expectations for many years in its ability to provide credit for American farmers at practically no cost to our government, would be under attack by our government, but it is."

He said the government contends the FCS and other such agencies are in direct competition with the federal treasury in the money market, thus causing treasury to pay higher interest. "We should not ask FCS to give up a favorable position for farmers in the money market, but instead, get the federal government on a balanced budget and out of the money market," declared Andersen.

In the area of soil-water conservation, Andersen called for continuing programs of government participation, at all levels, to assist in providing the project research, the technical assistance and a share of the funding to build permanent small farm structures for water containment and run-off control. He warned, "We can expect less funding on the federal level as the years go by, which means the state, county and private land owner will assume a larger share."

The Grange leader charged that revisions to the 1902 Reclamation Act as passed by Congress recently represents an almost total lack of interest in family farm agriculture. He said the inclusions and exemptions mean more of the same abuse by large corporations by their use of federally subsidized water. He said the Grange's position, which is also supported by recent studies by the USDA and Washington State University, indicate a 500 acre farm will provide opportunities for the most efficient production by American farmers.

Increased exports of agricultural commodities is a top priority of the Reagan Administration, Andersen said. He cautioned, however, that pressure from Congress and some commodity groups to subsidize agricultural exports places the Administration in a difficult position. It means that the U S would be turning to a position on international trade that the Grange believes to be in violation of the General Agreement on Trade and Tariffs (GATT)

Our recommendation Andersen supports as a means to protect the U.S. export market is to "buy down" the interest rate on loans made to countries buying U.S. agricultural commodities. He said, "We cannot sit by and let other countries steal our foreign markets, however, we should not and cannot be a part of a subsidy program we believe is illegal." He also said it is difficult to justify selling food to foreign countries at a lower cost than we sell to our own consumers.

Mohair promotion referendum set for Dec. 6-17

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The U.S. Department of Agriculture has scheduled a referendum Dec. 6-17 to allow mohair producers to decide whether to continue a market promotion and improvement program, according to Everett Rank, administrator of USDA's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

Rank said the proposed program is similar to one passed in 1971 except the new program would authorize larger deductions to be made from producer incentive payments.

If the referendum is approved by two-thirds of the producers voting — or by two-thirds of the total volume of production represented in the referendum — mohair incentive deductions would increase from the 1971 rate of 1-1/2 cents per pound to a rate of up to 4-1/2 cents per pound, Rank said.

Deductions will be used by the Mohair Council of America to finance advertising and sales promotion programs for mohair and goats in domestic and foreign markets, as well as information programs for producers on production managment and marketing improvement, he said.

Rank said ballots will be distributed in late November by county offices of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service. Producers may either mail in the ballots or drop them off in person at the county office by the Dec. 17 deadline, he said.

To be eligible to vote, a person must have owned goats six months old or older for at least 30 consecutive days in 1981. A cooperative may vote for its members, but if it does so, its members then are ineligible to vote for themselves, Rank said.

HARRISBURG — Hunters who make their presence known to other hunters just might be saving their own lives.

Last year 36 persons were shot in mistake for game in Pennsylvania. Sixteen were mistaken for turkeys. Precautions which can be taken by hunters might help reduce their chances of being involved in a mishap.

Should a hunter know another person is in the vicinity, he or she hopefully will be more cautious, more hesitant to shoot, and probably be more concerned that another human is not in the line of fire.

A friendly, spoken greeting might reveal one's presence. Possible a discreet cough might do the trick. Or perhaps a noisy exchange might be necessary.

Maybe a hunter will be deprived of a shot at a piece of game, but it is much better for that person to be upset about missing a game bird or animal than to find a gunshot victim. In any event, there should be some communication.

Rustling leaves or brush is not recommended to let another hunter know about one's presence, since game normally makes similar noises, too.

While the shooter always bears the burden of making absolutely sure of his or her target before firing, hunters who take some sensible precautions can avoid becoming likely targets for overly-anxious shooters.

Franklin District sells seedlings

CHAMBERSBURG — The annual tree seedling sale of the Franklin County Conservation District is now in full swing.

Seedlings, which come from a state-certified nursery, can be purchased in multiple lots of five, with the minimum order of five seedlings per species. There is no use restrictions on these.

Species available this year include Austrian pine, Scotch pine, white pine, Colorado blue spruce, Norway spruce, douglas fir, chinese chestnut, red maple, red oak, and black locust.

The seedlings are expected to arrive by the middle of April 1983. Those people ordering seedlings will be notified of the dates and pickup areas. Anyone interested in ordering seedlings should call or stop by the Franklin Conservation District office, 550 Cleveland Avenue, Chambersburg, or phone 717/264-8074.

Specter urges tamper-resistant packaging for all food

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Senator Arlen Specter (R-Pa.) has urged that the Food and Drug Administration to "promptly consider extending its proposed tamper-resistant drug packaging regulations to food and beverage products."

In a letter to Food and Drug Administration Commissioner Arthur Hayes, Specter noted the deliberate contamination of a soda bottle with ammonia in the Wilmington, Delaware area, calling the implications "frightening."

Specter is a member of the Senate Appropriations Subcommittee on Health and Human Services, with oversight of the Food and Drug Administration.

"Any visit to a supermarket reveals that almost all food and beverage packages are extremely vulnerable to be opened and resealed without possible detection.

"It is vitally important that American consumers have complete confidence in the safety of the products they buy for themselves and their families. The confidence has been severly perhaps irreparably shaken. We must confront the fact that public concerns about tampering with all products available for consumption will persist and must be allayed."

Specter said that adding tamper-resistant packaging for food and beverage products "would go far towards ensuring the safety and confidence of the public.

Specter called for a feasibility study of such packaging requirements as soon as possible.

Delano to join in trade talks

PARK RIDGE, Il. — American Farm Bureau Federation President Robert Delano will participate in international trade talks in Geneva, Switzerland Nov. 22-27 as a private sector member of the U.S. delegation led by U.S. Trade Representative William Brock.

The negotiations, in which 88 nations will be participating, are under the auspices of the General Agreement of Tariffs and Trade, the body that oversees international trading rules. Also in the delegation will be ten senators and six congressmen. The Department of Agriculture will be represented by Deputy Secretary Richard Lyng and Undersecretary for International Affairs Seeley Lodwick.

Upon accepting the invitation to be in the delegation from Ambassador Brock, Delano said, "Agriculture is playing an increasingly larger role in the international trade picture, with many of our trade disputes adversely affecting agricultural exports. Farmers and ranchers support their government's efforts to effectively address these trade problems in international forums."

The Richmond County, Virginia farmer, who has headed the nation's largest general farm organization since 1980, said he is hopeful that one key subject to be discussed will be the use of export subsidies by the European Community nations. He noted that the EC now spends $8 billion annually to export $26 billion worth of agricultural commodities, often at the expense of American farmers' export markets.

"The Europeans' practice of subsidizing exports to capture markets that have been traditionally served by the U.S. is symptomatic of the actions that are dragging the international trading system to the brink of chaos," Delano said. "I hope these upcoming talks will lead to ending dangerous trade-distorting practices."

Trapping season reminders

HARRISBURG — The season for trapping skunks, opossums, raccoons, foxes, weasels and coyotes opened statewide last Wednesday at 7 a.m., and closes Jan. 31. The muskrat trapping season runs from Dec. 26 through Jan. 9, while the beaver season opens Feb. 12 and closes March 13.

To maintain good relations with landowners, trappers are reminded by the Game Commission to ask permission before setting traps. They are also reminded that under the Game Law, traps may not be set in safety zones (areas within 150 yards of occupied houses or outbuildings associated with residences) unless advance permission has been received from the owner or occupant.

Trappers are also reminded to be careful in setting traps to avoid catching non-target animals, such as rabbits, cats, dogs, etc.

UNIVERSITY PARK — How was your 1982 cropping program? Did your crops get off to a good start and then just sit there? Did hay crops thin out and weeds take over? Did your corn crop suffer from weed competition?

A lot of things can go wrong during a cropping season. Some of them you can't control. Too little or too much rain is often the cause of poor crops. Cool weather slows down corn growth, but can stimulate grasses. Heavy storms, along with hail, can also be very damaging.

In addition, insect and disease attacks can ruin a promising crop year. Another pest — weeds — can reduce hay yields and affect hay quality. Weeds can easily reduce small grains, soybean and corn yields by 50 percent.

Some of these problems you can do little about; but, good management could have reduced or eliminated some of the problems.

Proper spraying with the right insecticide can reduce insect problems. Selection of disease resistant crop varieties can reduce disease problems. However, some of your problems could be due to acid soils.

"Acid soil will reduce the effectiveness of weed control materials," says Doug Beegle, Penn State Extension agronomist. "It can be the cause of weak and thin hay crops or can be the cause of poor corn and soybean yields."

Beegle says that acid soil is the robber in many crop fields. Now is the time to search out the culprit. Look for the signs — poor weed control, thin stands, off-color plants and weak growth.

If you see these signs, take soil samples in the troubled areas. Contact your county Extension office for more information. Chances are that you can prevent the problem next year by liming now.
